City to buy 17.65-acre Doolittle property for greenbelt

THE CITY MOVED this week to purchase the 17.65-acre Doolittle property at the northeast edge of the present city limits. The land, which will cost the city $120,000, will be kept as permanent open space. Mayor Barney Laiolo, making the announcement at last night's city council meeting, said that Mr. Doolittle was donating one-third of the total acreage to the city as an outright gift. Some recreational use will be sought for the desirable land which has been eyed by developers for many years. In photo above, the view is to the north, from Rio Road. Deep in the ravine is the view at left of the untrammelled, natural growth. For the full story, and map showing the location of the property, see page 8. (photos by George T.C. Smith)

Almost 400 attend OLAF's great 'old time' beach party and launch...

A grass roots effort to buy the Odello Ranch

BY PAT GRIFFITH

The oldtimers arrived first.

They carefully unloaded lightweight garden chairs from the trunks of their cars and set off with firm, deliberate steps across the cool sand. Past the flapping artichoke pennants, past the tables laden with food, they were drawn irresistibly by the flickering warmth of the bonfires. They chose their spots carefully, backs to the wind blowing in from the ocean and out of the path of billowing smoke, and there they waited, snug and secure inside their cocoons spun of soft wools and muted tweeds.

They were the vanguard for the OLAF picnic, and the quiet moments before crowds came were rightfully theirs.

As they sipped wine from paper cups, they spoke quietly to one another, recalling the countless times they had walked along the beach where the Carmel River meets the sea. Again and again eyes swept the familiar terrain -- the tidepools and marshlands nearby, the fields beyond blending into the dark green folds of the Fish ranch.

"The very idea of putting a hotel and lots of people in here," grumbled one man. "Community after community has been ruined. Why should we have to be ruined too? Isn't it time some community profited by what has happened to all the others?"

He looked up to watch a single sea gull floating through the thickening wisps of fog. "Men are supposed to have much bigger brains than birds. I wonder. I really wonder."

At the next bonfire the talk was the same. "I'm here for the cause," chirped Mrs. Eleanore Hamilton brightly. "Who wants to spoil this setting?

"I feel it's time people woke up and realized what a precious thing they have here. I walk on this beach all the time. I feel very keenly about this. Of course I'll be so this fight isn't for me. This is something for all time, for all people, for everyone's grandchildren and great grandchildren and on beyond them.

"That's why I think the children should be involved in this too."

xxx

THEY WERE. They arrived after six, trailing a wake of shoes, blankets, scarves, dogs and bemused parents.

There were lots of children, toddlers to teens, and within 60 seconds they had the whole scene appraised -- the chickens broiling on the giant grills, the pan of potato chips just there for the taking, the adults jabbering away -- and went scampering off to play baseball or toss a frisbie or splash in a nearby tidepool.

Two bright-eyed sprites named Hillary and Shannon dove head first under a table to choose a soft drink.

Did they know why they were at the beach?

"Sure, we're having a picnic," chortled four-year-old Shannon.

Why a picnic on a cold, foggy evening like this?

"Because we're at the beach," she retorted with clear logic, triumphantly pulling a can of root beer from the tub.

She skipped off merrily, only to return a moment later. "We're having a party to save the artichokes," she said gleefully. "That's what my daddy says. And you're a silly billy."

She was right. Only an adult would need a reason for a picnic at the beach.

Somewhere along the line Fred Farr, looking somewhat like a padded refugee from the Andes, hollered that dinner was ready, and the first of 375 people went through the line for a generous meal that would have been delicious even without the jugs of California's mountain red and white that preceded it, went along with it and flowed on into the night.

AS COZY AS A COUPLE OF SAND FLEAS under their Scotch plaid blanket, Eleanore Hamilton and Lusy Stay said it's not for themselves they would preserve the Odello land, but for children yet to come. "Once we lose it, it's gone forever," Mrs. Stay said. "You've got to start someplace," agreed Mrs. Hamilton. "So here we are."

The marinated chicken was grilled to perfection by Carmel Valley's John Kirchenbauer, who performed the incredible task of cooking for almost 400 people as his contribution to The Cause. His wife, Brigette, was the gourmet who prepared and seasoned the beans that were simmered to perfection in a bean pot big enough to serve all Carmel.

Salad was shoveled from the depths of another tub, and there were artichokes, mounds of them, halved and ready to eat with mayonnaise. (And the fact that Al Eisner, managing editor of The Pine Cone, got one with a worm in it was not, in this convivial setting, taken as a personal insult.)

xxx

THE SPEECHES came after dinner.

Farr opened with the astute observation that because of the "wind and waves and fog and wine," the real organization and business meeting for OLAF will be held next Tuesday, 8 p.m., at Brey Hall.

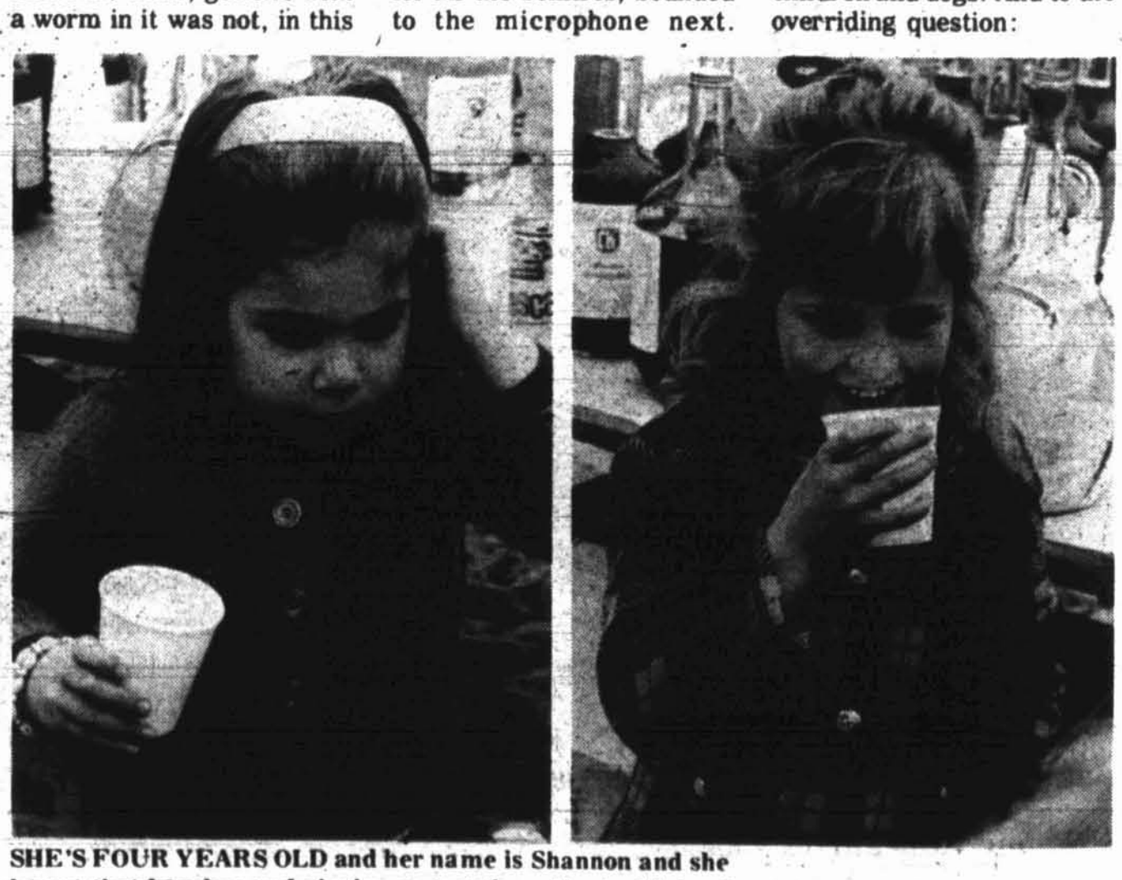
"Our hope, as you know, is to acquire the Odello lands through public subscription, and possibly through a combination of efforts," he said. "We need your helfp."

Cole Weston, who had spent the day lugging wood from his home to the beach for all the bonfires, bounded to the microphone next. Garbed in a windbreaker of lifejacket orange, he told the crowd he had come home after travelling 7000 miles to "some very exotic ports" and saw nothing that could top Carmel.

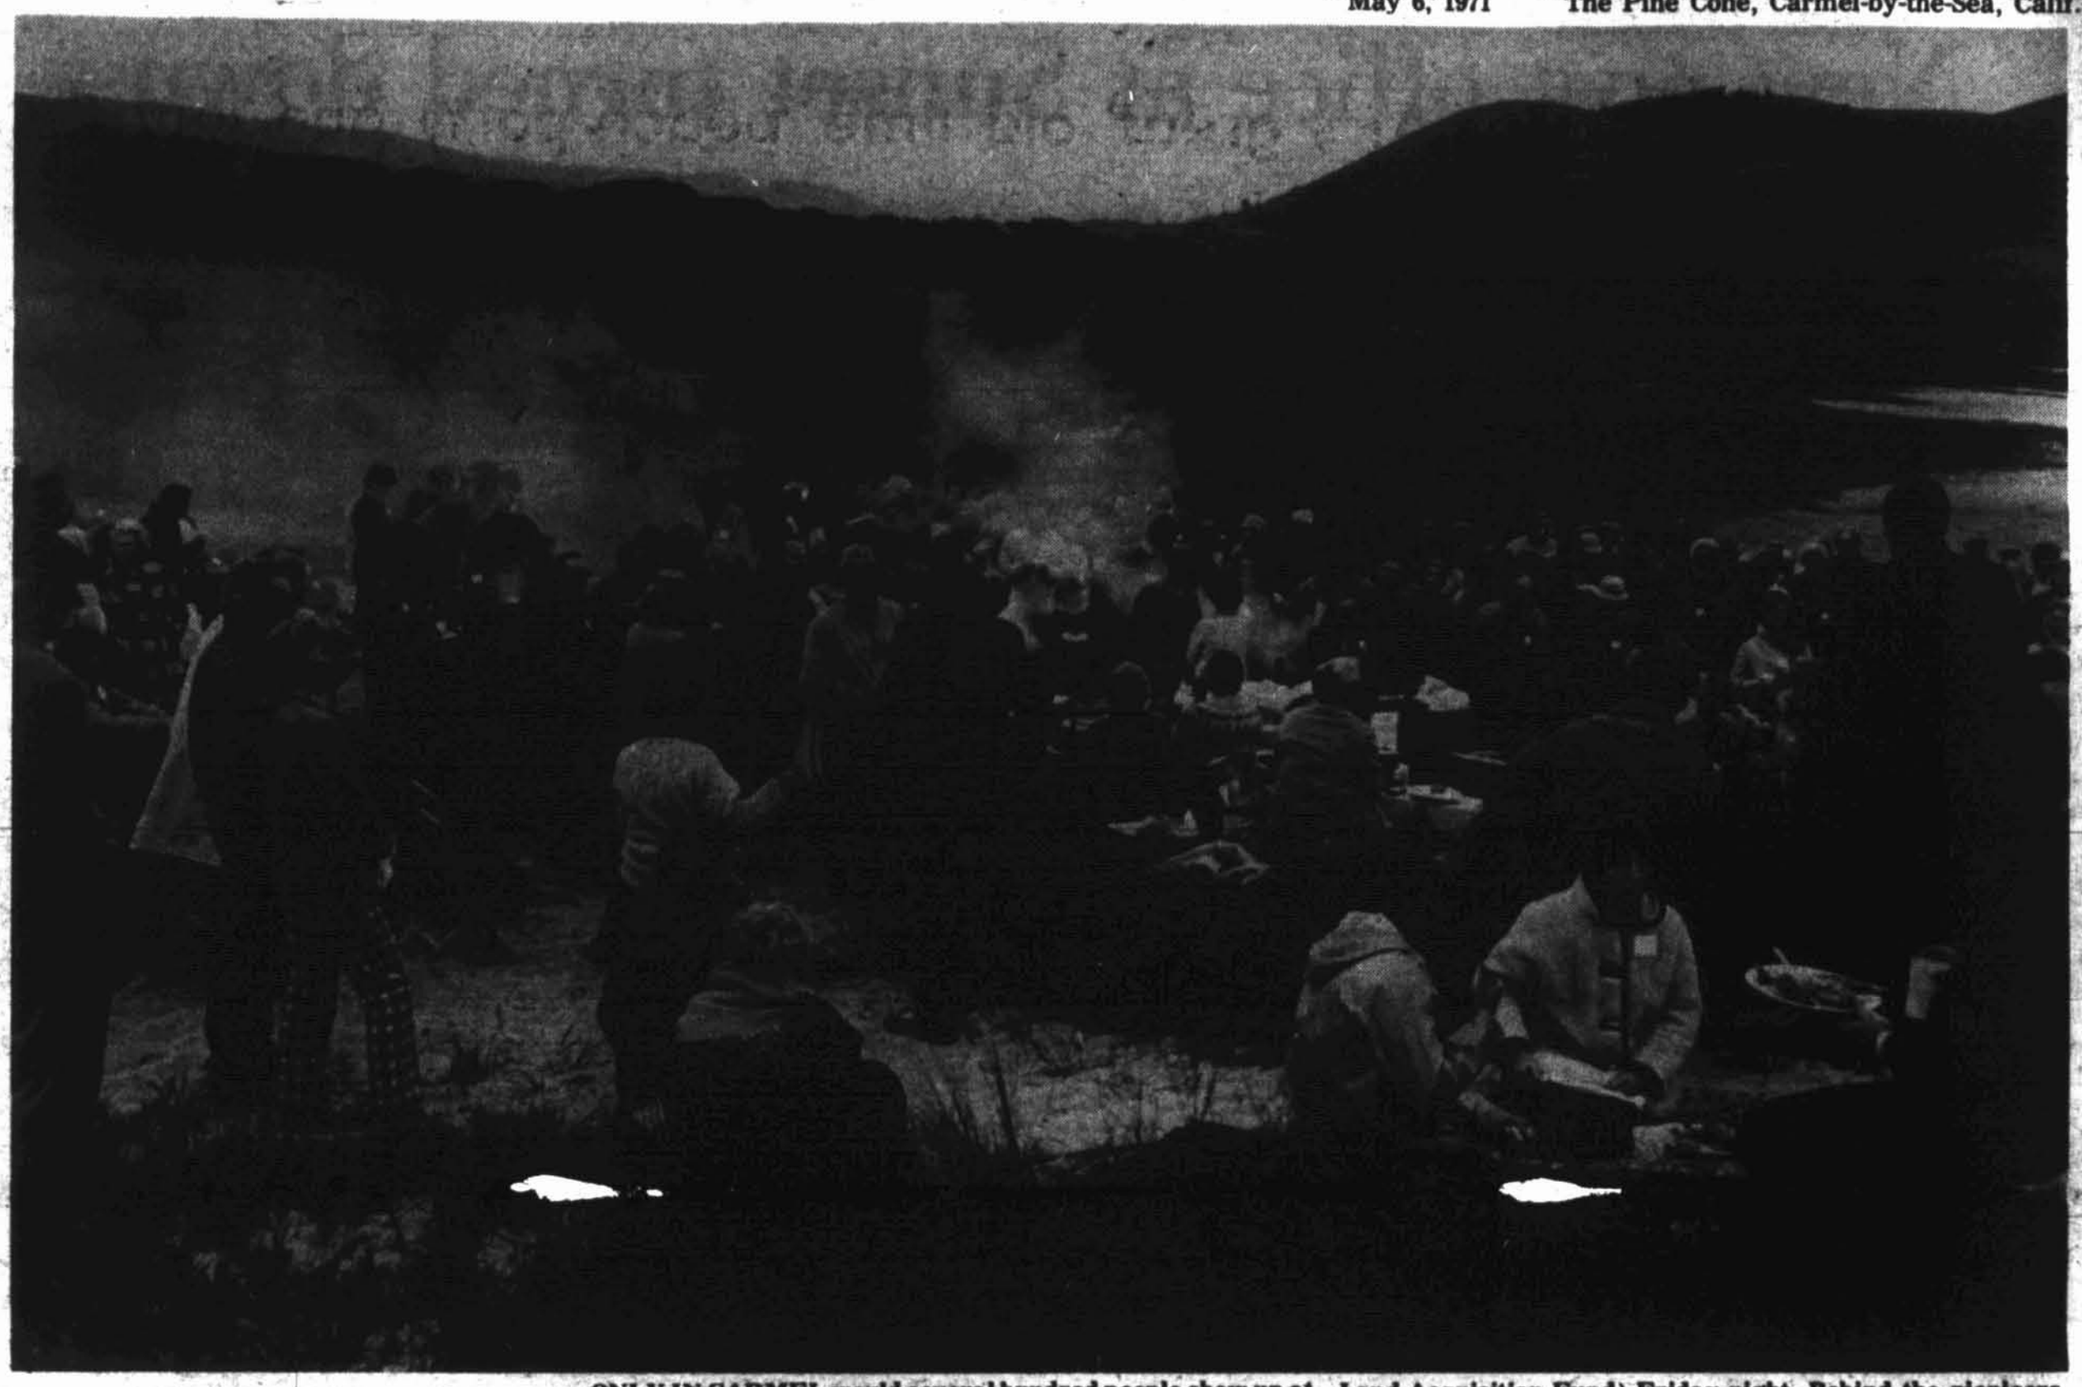
"There's nothing more beautiful in the whole world," he said. "I think we have to dig in and get together to show we no longer want this kind of development going in around here ... You can all dream about going to sea, but there's nothing better than what you have here."

There was applause and a few cheers. People turned back to more food, to the fires, to their frolicking children and dogs. And to the overriding question:

THE NOMINAL HOST for the whole event was OLAF chairman Fred Farr, right, here talking with poet Eric Barker of Big Sur. Thomas Broadbent and Claire Pentony are behind them. Farr's attire, something beyond the vocabulary of Women's Wear Daily, could loosely be described as jeans and a sweatshirt topped by an embroidered Mexican jacket and striped pants, also embroidered, from Columbia. He wasn't mistaken for anyone else all evening.



SHE'S FOUR YEARS OLD and her name is Shannon and she knows that beaches and picnics go together. She had lots of fun with her friend Hillary, right, after they found a tub of soft drinks underneath a table crowded with bottles of adult-type beverages.



ONLY IN CARMEL would several hundred people show up at a beach on a foggy, windy night in an effort to save 292 acres of artichokes from a fate worse than plume moths, namely impending demise under the blades of bulldozers. This was part of the scene at the picnic sponsored by OLAF (Odello Land Acquisition Fund) Friday night. Behind the picnicers are what it's all about – the marshlands and State Bird Sanctuary, the artichoke fields and the rolling green hills of the Fish Ranch.

Photos by George T.C. Smith

"How can we get the money?"

Someone suggested that OLAF sponsor "the biggest damn rummage sale this state has ever seen." Not only to raise money, the reasoning sent, but to get more people involved.

A student at Carmel High School suggested car washes, and a well-dressed woman recommended a major art and crafts auction that could include the work of both children and adults from throughout Monterey County ... or maybe even all of Northern California.

Three Carmel city councilmen were there – Eben Whittlesey, sporting a jaunty tam o'shanter, Frank Falge and Bernard Anderson. They'll help.

Attorney Skip Lloyd was saying that City Reconstruction Corp. of Los Angeles will withdraw its application if the Odellos are offered a fair price and if CRC gets back the $50,000 to $100,000 it has invested in plans thus far.

xxx

NIGHT HAD FALLEN, a starless night shrouded in fog. The picnic was over, but people were reluctant to leave and break the spell. Friends went on talking, sharing ideas and confidences. There was a feeling of faith and good will that seemed to hold young and old alike. People were listening to one another.

"What a beautiful evening. I haven't been to anything like this in Carmel for years. This is the way it used to be."

"Awww, Mom. I don't wanna go. This is too much fun."

"There are beautiful people here. Really beautiful."

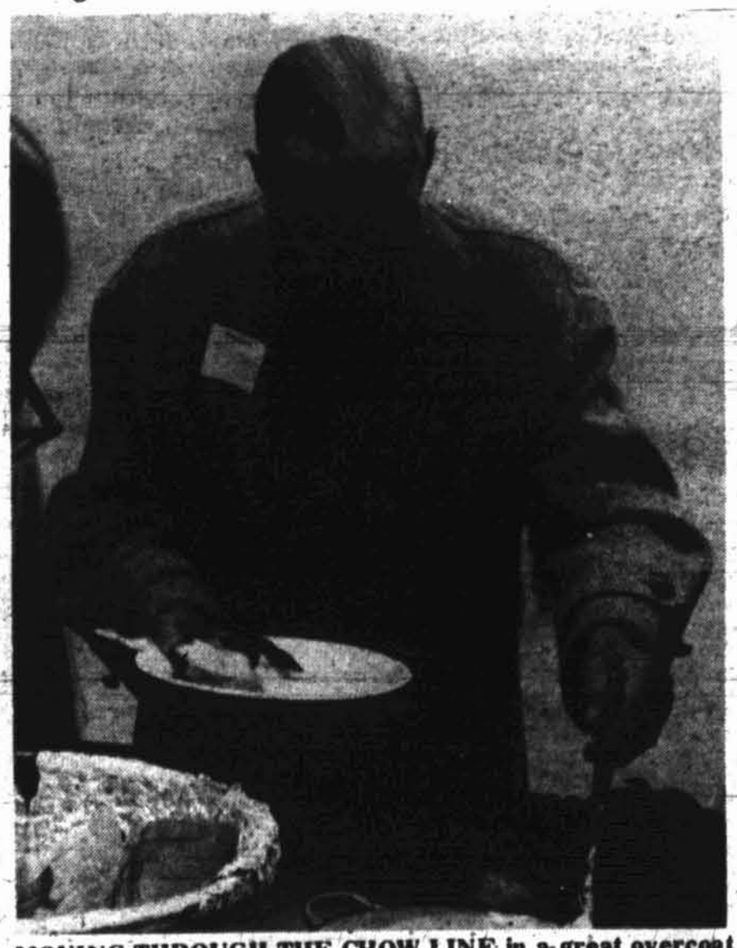
Some left, reluctantly. Many stayed on, moving in to vacated places around the bonfires. More wine was passed, and there was laughter and singing.

It was really too bad that the people who were spoken of so often during the evening – Bruno and Emilio Odello and Stuyvie Fish – weren't there.

They would have said it was a great "old time" party. They would have been among friends.

WAITING FOR THE PICNIC to begin, Col. Paul Hamilton and Mr. and Mrs. Rod Maddock have pretty well dug in their heels, which is what they would like to see the whole community do when it comes to large-scale developments.

HOWARD BRUNN, who is spearheading OLAF's businessmen's committee, spent his Friday night scooping up the tastiest beans this side of Boston for hungry throngs at the Carmel River beach.



MOVING THROUGH THE CHOW LINE in a great overcoat of oatmeal tweed, Adm. C.W. Fisher was the very essense of Carmel dignity and resolve at the OLAF picnic. Hatless despite the chill breeze and his 90 years, the imposing chairman of the Carmel Citizens Committee spurred on those half his age with his flat assurance: "I'm absolutely certain we're going to win on this. And I'm just as interested," he added, "in seeing that the Odellos get a square deal."

THE JOLLY ARTICHOKE CUTTER is Cole Weston, world-wide sailor and bon vivant, who worked like a team of pack mules Friday hauling wood to the beach, setting up tables and cheerfully performing countless preliminary chores "You're all very beautiful people," he told the crowd, "and I 'ove all of you."

New post office at Sunset turned down

The Pine Cone learned this week that the proposed new post office which would be located at Sunset Center has been rejected by federal officials.

Mayor Laiolo said he was advised by telephone that the long-sought project for the new facility was turned down "for budget reasons."

All post office matters are decided centrally in Washington. The agency does, however, maintain regional business offices, including real estate boards which negotiate with local governments for land sites.

Laiolo said the regional board head in San Francisco advised him last week that the post office appropriations committee had rejected the appropriation for the new post office, along with seven other proposed new post offices of 11- that were proposed for the region which encompasses the area from Sonoma to San Luis Obispo.

The city has been negotiating with post office officials for about two years for the sorely needed new facility, which would have been constructed adjacent to Sunset Cultural Center on San Carlos and Eighth. The site would have been leased to the government for approximately $15,000 per year.

While the decision appears final, Laiolo says the city "is not stopping there. We're going directly to Washington with this."

The mayor said he wrote a "pretty blunt" letter to Postmaster General Roger Blount expressing his disappointment, and pointing out that the city had gone through all the necessary preliminaries in good faith to satisfy the post office's requirements. "We held up the land for two years while they were making up their minds," Laiolo said, "which cost us money because of the lost revenues from the proposed ground lease."

The Carmel post office generates approximately $485,000 a year in revenues the mayor said, which is extraordinary for a city of this size. Laiolo said it was almost equal to revenues generated by the Monterey post office, which services a far greater population.

The mayor shrugged off the suggestion made by the official over the telephone that the city find a satellite location to accommodate an additional 1,000 lockboxes elsewhere in Carmel.

In his letter to Blount, Laiolo said he also castigated the post office for failing to appoint a postmaster for the Carmel post office for the past two years. The permanent appointment has been held up due to the post office reorganization program which will create a separate entity instead of an operation under direct federal management. Mel Taylor is functioning as "acting postmaster" in Carmel until a permanent appointment is made.

The location of a new post office in Carmel is a topic of wide general interest because of the great amount of foot traffic it generates. Its final location will have an effect on retail traffic patterns as well as real estate values.

The rejection of the Sunset site also has implications for the future development of the entire Sunset Center by the city. The overall plan called for the construction of a new post office on one end of Sunset, and a new city library on the other side. With the library suffering severe financial problems, the city fathers face some tough decisions on the future of the expensive property.

Carmel's first post office was in another village

By STEVE HAUK

Did you know the first Carmel Post Office was located in the village? If you think village means the town of Carmel, you might say, "Where did you think it might be. In the bay?"

The village, however, means Carmel Valley Village, or, rather, what is now Carmel Valley Village. That's where the first Carmel Post Office was established in 1889. The office, which was served out of Salinas via the Jamesburg Route by stagecoach, was a little building that still stands, as a cottage, in front of the White Oaks Inn.

There must not have been that much mail coming in those days. The office was closed in 1890 and first Postmaster Antonio Nunes found himself out of a job. It reopened in 1893 and three postmasters—Burritt Cahoon, John Hibbrom, Montgomery Whittock—successively directed its activities through 1903.

How did people in Carmel—then known as Las Manzanitas—get their mail? It was brought up the valley, by buckboard or horseback, one presumes, and, at first, handed out at a Las Manzanitas meat market owned by one Fatty Hansen.

Hansen's duties were passed down to J.P. Staples, who handed out letters and packages from a little general store, owned by a Mr. Williams, that was situated on the southwest corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

INTO THE BOXES: Irene Francis sorts the mail for insertion into the thousands of boxes at the Carmel post office. The post office department last week rejected plans for a new post office building at Sunset Center, suggesting instead that the city acquire a satellite distribution point with 1,000 additional post office boxes.

The Carmel Valley Village office was closed down in 1903, but plans were to reopen it in the Tularcitos area. This never happened, and J.F. Devendorf, who was soon to be instrumental in turning Las Manzanitas into Carmel-by-the-Sea, was the reason why.

Devendorf journeyed to Washington, D.C., and convinced postal authorities that the office would get better use in Carmel.

There are conflicting dates as to when Washington approved the establishment of the Carmel Post Office in Carmel. The two dates given are December of 1903 and March of 1904.

At any rate, a tradition had been established—the lockbox tradition. There are now some 4,700 lockboxes in the present post office at 5th and Dolores, a fact that would have astounded L.S. Slevin, the first postmaster in Carmel (although Staples, Mrs. Devendorf's brother, served as acting postmaster until Slevin fulfilled a one-year residency requirement).

A story goes that in 1904 Slevin was approached by a lockbox salesman from San Francisco. The salesman told Slevin that the fewest number of lockboxes he could purchase would be a row of eight.

Snorted Slevin: "Ridiculous! We would never need so many."

It's not known if the salesman made a sale. But it is known that Slevin made a purchase. He bought a lot on Ocean and San Carlos where Womble's Pharmacy now stands. He cleared the lot, which went for $325, and built a general store. This was Carmel's first official post office.

Being a postmaster back then seemingly did not mean exactly what it does now. For one thing, Slevin found quite a bit of mail—mail of an estraordinary nature—addressed to himself. For instance, he went out and collected live specimens and frogs and sent them to a lady in Providence, R.I., at her enveloped request. And he was quite cooperative when a professor in San Francisco asked him to measure Carmel Hills. Slevin was obviously a man of varied talents.

With Slevin's retirement in 1914, the post office was moved out of the general store to "a little hole in the wall." According to a clipping in the Nixon File at the Harrison Memorial Library, mail was picked up "on Ocean Avenue next to the drug store. It was just a little hole in the wall, no doors to open. One young fellow had a little car that he drove right up to his box to get his mail."

No doors, but lockboxes, you bet.

L.E. Payne ran this little post office for a year and was then succeeded by Carmel's first but not only postmistress, Miss Stella Vincent.

Things got better for Miss Vincent in 1922 when the post office was moved to Dolores Street near 7th Avenue and housed in a building just built by Tom Morgan. In 1929 Miss Vincent was succeeded by William Overstreet.

Then, in 1933, came Carmel's second and only other postmistress, Mrs. Irene Carter, who saw the office move two years later to a building on Mission Street and Ocean where the number of lockboxes continued to grow.

Ernest Bixler took over in 1940 but was promptly called away to war, leaving the reins in the hands of acting postmaster Fred Bechdolt. In 1941 the post office again moved, this time to the R.G. Leidig Building on Dolores between 5th and 6th streets. Bixler, who still goes to the Carmel post office for his mail, came back in 1945 and served until June of 1951 when he retired.

In October of the same year, the post office moved to its present location with A.M. Molner as acting postmaster until his death in 1953. Fred Mylar, who had been assistant postmaster for 13 or 14 years, succeeded Molner.

Molner died in July of 1957. He was succeeded by Fred Strong, a resident of Carmel Mesa, who retired two years ago. Strong's assistant, Bill Woolsey, a Carmel resident, retired a few months ago as acting postmaster.

All have reigned over a post office famous for being the village's social hub. Mainly because of lockboxes.

Which are now the responsibility of Mel Taylor.

If Slevin could only see it now.

The conscience of Carmel:

What's happened to 'Heritage City'?

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

JUST WHAT'S HAPPENED to that Heritage City idea? Wasn't it supposed to be the means to save the whole Carmel and Carmel-Valley area from the Bulldozers, from the out-of-town developers, from all the would-be destroyers of whatever kind from wherever they might come?

That was the idea. And it's still the idea. And every day people come to my office to ask for extra copies of the Pine Cone supplement which described the Heritage City proposal (which was, as you may recall, part of the March 4th Pine Cone issue). Sometimes – as during the past week – there are long-distance phone calls from people in other parts of California (where the Pine Cone circulates) asking for new word about the Heritage-City-for-Carmel plan. And occasionally, there are even inquiries about it from people residing in other states, who feel the idea could have application to certain treasured communities in their states.

One such inquiry came from a Virginian who had lived all his life just outside of Charlottesville where the University of Virginia is situated and where Thomas-Jefferson-memorabilia abound.

Meanwhile, however, there are more immediately urgent matters with which dedicated local Carmelites have to deal, than the eventuality of seeking to have established here, through action of the state legislature, the special-and-powerful Heritage City which could, of course, ultimately save-for-good the kind of Carmel those dedicated Carmelites hopefully envision.

However, if you are not yet one of those hundreds already involved in some specific way – either through the Carmel Area Coalition of through OLAF (Odello Land Acquisition Fund) – in trying to take those immediate steps or to make those immediate efforts, to see that much of what is so scenically and environmentally priceless, is actually rescued from immediately threatening bulldozers, you might still wonder why anything else whould stand in the way of an immediate and all-put effort to seek the state legislative action to put into operation that Heritage-City-for-Carmel plan.

IF THAT IS the case, and if you are not yet personally involved in the work of the Carmel Area Coalition, or of OLAF, I can only urge you to become so involved, for it must never be forgotten, that once such a sizeable area as the Odello artichoke ranch, located just to the south of the City of Carmel, right near the mouth of the Carmel River, and adjacent to an already state-owned beach and bird sanctuary, were to be lost, a most important part of the magnificent Carmel scenic-backdrop would have been sacrificed, and thus lost forever, no matter what an eventual Heritage-City-for-Carmel might later try to do about it.

If, however, you are a new Pine Cone reader (and there are many new ones every week) or if you have, so far, not followed the reporting of efforts being made by the Carmel Area Coalition and by OLAF, to put the nearly-300-acre-Odello-ranch into public "open space" or "greenbelt" or "park" use, you may want to know just what the Coalition or OLAF, are, and just how you can get in touch with them. Or make a contribution of time, or of money, or of both, to one or the other, or, again, to both.

The Carmel Area Coalition was established through the efforts of leaders of the various home-owner and citizen-group organizations which have long existed up and down the Carmel Valley and in and about Carmel. It was felt that a single entity – the Carmel Area Coalition – could best conduct the campaign and concentrate the effort of all dedicated Carmelites, in the saving of threatened scenic areas in the whole Carmel River watershed. At present, the Coalition effort is principally focused upon trying to retain what is called one-acre-per-dwelling-unit zoning wherever that zoning still exists, and to retain in agricultural use, or in "low density" residential use, such areas as the Odello artichoke ranch on which a Los-Angeles-based developer, City Reconstruction Company, wants to build a total of 1844 dwelling units – if it can get the required rezoning to do that.

WHEN THE CITY RECONSTRUCTION Company rezoning request first came before the County Planning Commission at a long night meeting at the end of March, that Commission postponed consideration of the request until next July 28th. It was spokesmen from the Carmel Area Coalition, as well as from all the various separate organizations it represents, which won the four-month delay – until July 28th – from the County Commission.

Steering committee members of the Coalition are: Mrs. Phil S. Gibson, Kenneth McGinnis, Don Harrison, Klar Wennerholm, and Cole Weston (with McGinnis acting as secretary). The Coalition, which soon expects to open an office at Sunset Center, can be reached by mail at P.O. Box 21, Carmel.

Recognizing that more would be required in the case of the Odello artichoke ranch, than simply trying to keep the high-density rezoning sought by City Reconstruction Company, from being granted, the Carmel Area Coalition encouraged the formation of an entirely separate organization to try to raise funds to purchase the Odello ranch for public park use.

The new group, known simply by its initials as OLAF (Odello Land Acquisition Fund) – is now in operation and has just begun to seek funds, on a tax-exempt basis, to attempt to arrange purchase of the Odello property whenever such a purchase may become possible. (At present, City Reconstruction Company, has an option to buy and to develop the Odello land, but to do so, as we have already said, would require high-density rezoning, which may become difficult to obtain from the county officials who have not yet acted upon it – first, the County Planning Commission; then, the County Board of Supervisors).

Heading the OLAF effort is former State Senator Fred Farr, who served as highway beautification administrator in the federal government in Washington, following long service in the California State Legislature. The OLAF office is located on 7th near Monte Verde, and its phone number is 624-2820. Volunteers staff the OLAF office on week-day afternoons, from Monday to Friday. OLAF can be reached by mail at P.O. Box 3844.

If – in addition to aiding in the present urgent Coalition and-or OLAF effort – you feel you want to do more, you can, of course, try to encourage anyone with access to a state assemblyman or state senator, to urge that early consideration be given by the State Legislature to the establishment of Heritage-City-for-Carmel. That is, of course, in my view, most important.

Cost of needed new school buses causes anguish

Said Richard T. Wilsdon, president of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education:

"How do you propose to pay for this?"

Replied Walter E. Hinton, district business manager, after a pause of some few seconds:

"I was just identifying the problem."

Laughter from the board.

But the general bent of trustee dialogue at last week's board meeting indicated that the problem -- the need for three more school buses -- is not all that funny.

Student transportation has always been a district problem and there's no sign it will ever go away. At 594 square miles, the district is one of the larger in the state in area although having a student enrollment roughly comparable to the Pacific Grove Unified School District's which covers only four square miles.

Hinton had intended to come before the board stating the need for two buses, but earlier in the week one of the district's 16 buses had been condemned - "We simply have worn it out" - resulting in the need for three.

The business manager said that to pay for the buses the board would "have to tap the reserves."

But the board decided not to "tap" anything. Wilsdon's motion and Rev. James W. Brock's second to purchase two new 91-passenger coaches and a 66-passenger conventional, which would have come at a cost of about $73,000, was defeated by a three-to-two vote, the "no" votes coming from Hilton M. Bialek, James I. Miller and Steven H. Sassoon.

Sassoon said, "Why don't we wait until we study the (fiscal 1971-72) budget in detail."

NO RESERVE

Superintendent Harris A. Taylor was concerned that, with the condemnation of a bus, the district didn't have anything in reserve in case a bus broke down. Explaining that if there was a bus breakdown before the school year ended a run would have to be dropped and there would be some students without transportation, he asked the board if it might not be "prudent" to authorize the purchase of at least one bus.

Sassoon replied that the bus had just been condemned and he wasn't prepared to vote on its replacement.

"I just wanted you to be aware," Taylor said.

Before the vote, Hinton explained in his report the need for the buses:

"In order to have a more desirable instructional schedule at Carmel Middle School, it will be necessary to purchase two additional buses. If these buses are not purchased, the options open to the board would be to hire four and one-half teachers in order to extend the instructional day or to pay to have gym supervision for nearly an hour each morning for large groups of students.

"At the present time, we are rather limited as to the number of students that can be transported to Middle School for 9 a.m. classes. We can handle unlimited loads at 8 o'clock, but the later hour is in direct conflict with elementary school transportation.

"It is also not feasible to start anything but elective Middle School classes at 8 a.m.," the report continued, "because the normal dismissal time would be about the same as the elementary schools, and we would not have sufficient bus capacity. When Middle School is dismissed, we need nearly every bus to provide transportation for those 700 students."

Taylor explained that about 300 students arrive at Middle School for the 8 a.m. elective classes and that if all the students arrived at that time the additional teachers required would cost the district about $40,000.

DILEMMA

Sassoon said, "Why don't we attack this problem in a different way" and eliminate nonessential transportation. "Instructional bowling, for instance. I can't see buying a $35,000 bus for instructional bowling."

While Hinton said that the district has purchased only two new buses in the last five years, Sassoon said that "some kind of vehicle" has been purchased at least every year.

"... our enrollment is increasing by one percent and we are increasing our busing capacity by 10 percent," he said.

Taylor said more families are moving into Cachagua (in Carmel Valley) which "will extend our run even further."

"I surely don't like the idea of making such a proposal to the board when looking at the total financial picture," said Taylor, who added that he agreed with Sassoon that it would be better if the money could be used for the academic program, but "what we are basically talking about here is getting the kids to and fron school."

"Well, I'm wondering, " Brock said, "if we did purchase two new buses if that would alleviate the problem and the district would not have to purchase another bus next year?"

Hinton said that if the other buses hold out the district could get by with two 66-passenger buses, although there might be a need for a 91-passenger coach. He was then informed that another of the district's buses will be 15 years old next year and should be replaced.

If the district was to purchase at least two buses, Hinton pointed out five options: to purchase a new 91-passenger coach and a 66-passenger conventional for a $39,000 total; one new coach and one new conventional for $45,000; two new conventionals for $22,000; a new conventional and a used conventional for $16,000, or two used conventionals for $10,000.

Hinton pointed out that although a new coach costs $34,000 compared to $11,000 for a new conventional, if both vehicles were used for 17 years and 350,000 miles, the diesel coach could save the district $27,161 over the gasoline-fueled conventional through milesage, cost of fuel and student capacity.

...Two youths knocked at a Carmel woman's door Friday night, claiming they were selling subscriptions to a San Francisco newspaper. Door-to-door soliciting is illegal in Carmel. One of the youths asked for a glass of water. The lady said she didn't want to unlock the screen door and told him so. The youth persisted. The lady told them to come back the next day during daylight hours. They didn't. Probably not very thirsty...

...Sunday night a Carmel man in San Francisco calling his home kept getting a [illegible] who said he was calling the wrong number. Afraid someone who wasn't supposed to be was in his house he called police. They sent a patrol unit to the house. No one there. Called the man's number and got the same lady. Police notified the party responsible for the mix-up. Pacific Telephone and Telegraph...

City to buy 17.65-acre Doolittle property for $120,000

The city is engaged in final negotiations to acquire the 17.65-acre Doolittle property opposite Carmel Mission adjacent to the northeast portion of the city.

Mayor Barney Laiolo made the announcement at last night's regular monthly meeting of the city council.

The purchase, which will be financed with greenbelt funds accumulated through the five percent hostelry tax, will cost $120,000.

The final conditions of payment have not yet been made, Laiolo told the council, but once the agreement is agreed upon and signed by all parties, the monies will be set aside in one chunk. There is approximately $250,000 in the greenbelt fund now, and some $16,000 is added every month from motel tax revenues.

One-third of the total property will be given to the city by the owner, William Doolittle, as an outright gift.

The parcel includes about 10 acres of "buildable, level land," Laiolo said; the rest of the property is in a ravine, and is in a completely natural state.

Mayor Laiolo and Doolittle have been in negotiation for some nine months. The mayor described Doolittle as "a real fine gentleman to deal with," and an ardent conservationist. Doolittle is a member of the Sierra Club, the Wilderness Society and the Save the Redwoods League.

The property was originally bought by his uncle, Robert Doolittle, who acquired it to assure a permanent view from his hilltop home on Ridgewood Road.

The land will be set aside for a permanent green belt with some recreational facilities.

Restrictions for the use of the property were sought by Doolittle, most of which seem very reasonable to the mayor.

Among the conditions are: permitting "no more than three tennis courts; restrooms will be allowed, but they must be partially hidden from view; installation of up to 10 picnic tables; and no open fires will be allowed.

Laiolo said the use of landfill will be allowed to bring the grade level to a desirable height. This will be a valuable "fringe benefit" for the city, he said, because it will be a more convenient place for the city to transport its fill.

The mayor, recognizing that some citizens may feel that the funds could be used to help purchase part of the Odello artichoke fields which face high-density development, said that "we have to think of home first." He said he thought the city would be "happy to be a part of it(the Odello purchase)," but that the Doolittle property took precedence in importance to the people of Carmel.

Public hearings on greenbelt acquisitions are not necessary, the mayor explained. Once the terms are worked out to the satisfaction of the seller and the city council the only requirement is the signatures of all the city councilmen.

School board weighs swapping dirt for tractor

Administrative agencies usually do their trading with money; the days of swapping item for item are pretty well gone.

But the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education at last week's meeting paved the way for what, in affect, could result in the district trading an old tractor and dirt for a later model tractor when it unanimously approved the sale to the highest bidder of 5,000 cubic yards of excess dirt located behind Carmel Middle School.

Business Manager Walter E. Hinton brought the matter to the board's attention when he said, "This is something that could cost the district nothing," and went on to explain:

"What has occurred here: a gentleman (Max Hodges) came to talk to me the other day who is turning a 1966 industrial tractor in on a new tractor. His reason for doing this is because he has used up all the depreciation on the existing tractor."

Hinton went on to say that the old district tractor is no longer of much use -- "The scraper doesn't do much scraping" - while Hodges' tractor has proved its value because it "is the one that's been doing most of the work throughout the district for us in the last three or four years."

Hodges, said Hinton, is willing to have both of the tractors appraised and "has agreed to accept dirt in payment for the balance ..."

"What kind of dirt?" said a board member.

"Just dirt."

Asked another board member, "Dirty dirt?"

"Plain dirty dirt," replied Hinton. "So this immediately means there will be no dollars involved except for what will be necessary to pay the State of California for the use tax (estimated at about $20)."

LEGAL PROBLEM

But you just can't trade a tractor for dirt as simply as all that, as Hinton explained:

"I called the county counsel because immediately it came to mind that what's really happening here is if we try to swap dirt and a tractor, you are taking the competitive potential away from other similar contractors in the area. The county counsel said it sounded like an excellent idea but we'd have to put the dirt up for an open bid (board laughter)."

The dirt will come from a plateau behind the school. In fact, Hinton said, the district could let go of 8,000 cubic yards of dirt where, during rains, large pools of water are formed.

"One thing that we were kind of concerned about is this really surplus dirt, or dirt we'd need at a later date in the school district. So we've gone into that and we've looked things over and we have pretty well accomplished the tasks we set out to do as far as dirt is concerned ...

"We would still have quite a bit of dirt left at Middle School for ourselves. And we still have a tremendous amount of dirt and topsoil, good topsoil, at the Carmelo site, which, incidentally, could be lowered from where it is right now; it's too high in the back and drains the wrong way. So I don't see how we could be hurt on this thing at all as long as we take the proper legal steps. And the minimum steps involved would be for the board to authorize us to post at three public places notices to sell personal property ... and that notice would have to be up for two consecutive weeks."

To a question from a board member, Hinton said that "if somebody besides Mr. Hodges buys it (the dirt), the deal still goes as far as the tractors are concerned ... we just get more money. Because the only way they would get it would be to outbid him."

"THIS SLIPPER doesn't feel right," complained a lady in a Carmel shoe store.

"You asked for 'medium' didn't you, Madam?" inquired the clerk.

"Yes, I always take a medium size."

"Well," said the tired-sounding clerk, "that's as medium as they come."

YOUNG ENOUGH to be up-to-date and old enough to have a seasoned philosophy, a Carmel woman commented on a young friend's espousement of the Women's Liberation cause.

"Certainly, women should be people," she conceeded, "but not imitation men!"

SAD COMMENTARY that even in this lovely village the Knudsen Dairy truck has inscribed on its door, "Driver carries no money."

SHE'S 18 and she holds what she thinks is a good job, for one right out of high school.

"But don't you want to get more education?" asked a concerned friend of the girl's mother.

"No, I just want to get married and have six children."

"SIX! In this day and age?"

"Yes," the girl answered firmly, "because I already have their names picked out—Harry, Larry and Barry, and Jean, Joan and Jane!"

HE'S SO small he still lisps a little, but he's old enough to be a swinging Pine Cone salesman. Last week he returned to the office shouting—he always shouts—a complaint.

"Guess what happened at the Post Office—I got a hole in my favorite pocket! The one I keep my money in!"

WHY DO Carmel people piously persist in saying there's no poverty in the village? Ever hear a little old lady, finishing her plate at a restaurant where she gets the most lunch for her money, say, "There, I've had my meal for the day." That means tea and toast for breakfast, a can of soup for supper.

And there are grocery stores that accept food stamps. And the little boy who told us candidly, "My mother belongs to the welfare."

WHEN THE Robert Koplans, who operate the shop called Coffee Beans and Tea Leaves, decided to discontinue their excellent line of herbs and spices, they didn't put them on sale but donated all the remaining 600 jars to the SPCA Benefit Shop, over in Pantiles Court.

One of the SPCA shop volunteers wrote a thank-you letter, signing it "The Animals at the SPCA Shelter" and added a paw print. The Koplans were so pleased they've had the note framed and hung in their shop.

Hacienda Carmel directed to get state rest home license

The Monterey County Planning Commission last week directed Hacienda Carmel to go back to the State and try to get a new license as a rest home.

This would be preferable, commissioners agreed, to any change in zoning which would set a precedent for high-density development in Carmel Valley.

For the past several months, directors of the Hacienda have been attempting to put the retirement community back on a legal footing with the county. When the Hacienda was originally built, it qualified for a use permit under the provisions of the "G" zone, which allows rest homes that are licensed by the state. However, the Hacienda dropped its license in 1966 when the state imposed more stringent and expensive requirements, and thus has been in violation of the county zoning ordinance ever since.

Hacienda directors originally suggested that the Planning Commission amend the "G" zone to allow retirement communities per se. This ran into opposition from the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and others who contended this would leave the Valley wide-open for all types of high-density development.

The Hacienda then requested that the Planning Commission rezone its property to "ST" (special treatment) with a density of 7.5 units per acre. This, too, was opposed on the grounds it would set a dangerous p[illegible] area that is now covered by one-acre minimum zoning.

After hearing arguments pro and con last week, the commission continued the rezoning hearing for five months, to Sept. 29. The commission also offered the services of its staff in any meetings with the State Department of Social Welfare, which issues licenses for rest homes.

'Vietnamese children display a very strong will to live under circumstances that challenge all mankind'

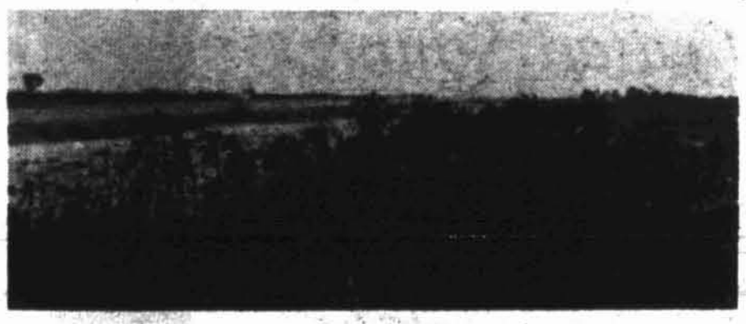
A fund-raising campaign to endow the GEM-Bach Mai Foundation, an organization set up by Carmel's Georgianne Matthews to give birth to an orphanage in South Vietnam, begins this month with a violin concert at Sunset Center.

Madeline Schatz, a longtime friend of Miss Matthews, will play a classical program May 23 at 8:30 p.m. The musician and her accompanist, who are flying in from Indiana, are donating their time. Miss Schatz has performed in Russia, Holland and Austria.

Miss Matthews, a young woman of tremendous perserverance and efficiency, is seeking backing to construct the orphanage and feed, cloth and educate 250 children on a sustained basis. Education is a key part of the plan, as the orphanage will be one of the few in the country which offers a constructive care program.

Miss Matthews tells of visiting existing orphanages housing 2,000 youngsters where individuals die every week from starvation and other forms of privation, and where there are the barest provisions for continuing education.

VIETNAMESE KIDS were shy but loved to have their photographs taken.



SOUTH VIETNAMESE government has offered up to 1,000 acres of land for a building site and agricultural development off a new road 12 kilometers from Saigon.

MEAGER DIET sustains children in large orphanage. Little continuing education is offered—a shortcoming the foundation hopes to correct. Boy on left is half-Vietnamese, half-Caucasian.

The GEM-Bach Mai orphanage will draw most of its youngsters from existing orphanages. Many suffer mental or emotional disturbances, for which educational and vocational training will provide invaluable therapy.

Miss Matthews recently returned from a self-financed trip around the world, culminating with a month's stay in South Vietnam, during which she sought support for the foundation.

"The whole trip was extremely sufficient," she says.

Representatives were solicited in Austria, Switzerland, Turkey and India, to add international support to American and Vietnamese efforts.

In Saigon, the ministries of social welfare and education arranged for the donation of 1,000 acres of land 12 kilometers from the South Vietnamese capital. The gift indicates the encouraging interest shown by the Saigon government in the foundation's project, says Miss Matthews.

Construction, when it begins, will be on a modest scale. All materials will be indigenous. A more elaborate approach might result in a white elephant, Miss Matthews fears.

"We are always mindful of the Vietnamese culture," she says.

Mindfulness on a personal level for Miss Matthews meant Vietnamese language lessons and Vietnamese quarters during her stay. The language is very difficult to learn, she says.

She also learned to wear the "ao-dai", the dress with split skirt worn over pajama bottoms by Vietnamese women and has worn one in appearances in Carmel.

While in Saigon, Miss Matthews was in contact with Miss Truong Thi Bach Mai, the 28-year-old Vietnamese coordinator and representative for the foundation. Miss Bach Mai has had previous work in orphanages and assisted in running a hospital operated by her mother.

Miss Matthews, an intense, attractive woman who is 32 years old, brings to the endeavor experience in teaching emotionally-disturbed and mentally-retarded children. She says she has planned the orphanage since age 15 and in preparation has traveled around the world several times visiting homes, schools and hospitals for children. She has been a resident of Carmel for 12 years.

GEORGIANNE MATTHEWS models Vietnamese Ao-Dai in rose garden of her Carmel home.

"I was impressed by the spontaneous smiles of the Vietnamese children," she says. "They display a very strong will to live under circumstances that challenge all mankind."

A photo album Miss Matthews compiled in Vietnam shows clusters of graceful, smiling children. Their innocent enchantment with the camera is obvious.

"They're very shy but love to have their picture taken," she says.

Miss Matthews feels her immediate task is to cultivate as wide a base of support as possible for the orphanage.

"This is not an American project, it's a human project," she says. "I'm not wishing to make any political statements about the war. I just want to go there and help people whose lives have been greatly trespassed upon."

Tickets for the May 23 concert can be arranged with Miss Matthews by calling 624-4215. Santa Catalina School girls are also donating time to selling the tickets. Donation ia $5 and are tax deductible.

VIETNAMESE REPRESENTATIVE for the orphanage, Miss Bach Mai, and small friend greeted Georgianne Matthews in Saigon.

AN OPPORTUNITY to practice Vietnamese language is afforded Georgianne Matthews by group of small Saigon neighbors.

Dr. Hardin Jones on drug abuse...

Causes brain impairment

If young people will let their bodies and brains develop naturally, without trying to short-circuit things with harmful drugs, they will develop into mature adults able to enjoy a variety of sensual pleasure far more rewarding than anything discovered through marijuana, heroin or LSD.

Even mild doses of these and similar drugs cause disturbances in the growth potential of the brain to develop appropriate reward mechanisms, and heavy doses can permanently alter one's ability to enjoy life and receive gratification from it.

These were the two basic messages passed on to students at Carmel Middle School and Carmel High School last week by Dr. Hardin Jones, professor of medical physics and physiology at the University of California.

Dr. Jones who spoke several places during a three-day visit to the Monterey Peninsula, emphasized the long-lasting physiological affects of drugs upon the brain.

The gratification centers within the brain, he explained, are much more powerful than those found in animals because "we are thinking individuals." These centers are trained to react over a period of years, he said, as in the case of one acquiring a taste for gourmet food or an appreciation of fine music.

"For instance," he told Middle School's eighth graders, "if you play a musical instrument ... it can be a drag to practice, but you feel good when you play well. That's the pleasure mechanism working."

Drugs such as alcohol, marijuana and heroin can artifically stimulate these pleasure mechanisms, he continued, causing you to have "totally goofy reactions to situations that a normal person would face with value reactions."

As an example, he said a person under the influence of marijuana might stare at an ant on the ground and then go into a fit of giggling. "Drugs of this sort are capable of causing tremendous distortions," he said.

"It is not at all uncommon in Carmel Valley to find young people not much older than you using heroin," Dr. Jones added (Questioned later, he said this information came from police. "The school people didn't know about this heroin use," he said, "but of course these are people who have dropped out of school, so the schools wouldn't know." He did not have any figures on the number of heroin users in Carmel Valley.)

Dr. Jones told the students they are at a point where they are learning to use their bodies well and to train their minds so they will feel gratification.

ARTIFICIAL REWARDS

"The heroin user gets this reward artifically, and with a fairly big impact," he said. "And if you use any drug which gets a pleasure reaction, you're going to have to increase it ...

"If you drank one quart of whiskey a day for one week, you'd do as much mental damage to the reward mechanism as heroin, and the damage is permanent, just as the damage from heroin is permanent to the brain's reward system."

Dr. Jones said he considers marijuana "more powerful than alcohol in normal use," and that hashish would be the "world's greatest anesthetic, because it disconnects all pain sensations," except for its after affects which "boggle the mind for at least a year and a half."

Because hashish causes permanent damage to the reward system in the brain, it has never been used as an anesthetic, he said.

At both schools Dr. Jones told the story of a former heroin addict he interviewed when the man was 35. Although the man had been off of heroin for 10 years, he told Dr. Jones he was "still an addict" because it was a struggle to face each day.

The man told Dr. Jones he no longer got pleasure from his surroundings or good food, and said that his sex life was not nearly as satisfying as it had been before he became an addict at the age of 15.

"I am empty and I am incapable of being fulfilled," Dr. Jones quoted the man as saying.

Dr. Jones told the students that most people who have their reward centers "goofed up" become sexually incompetant, and that anyone who is heavily into drugs becomes sexually impotent.

ALL THE WAY

He said the odds are that someone who starts out with marijuana will make it all the way through the drug spectrum, basing this on reports which, he said, indicate there are now one million heroin users between the ages of 12 and 30 in this country, "when six years ago there were only about 100 in the college-age group, and about 25,000 in the country as a whole, mostly in the slums or in the prostitution racket."

Druing a brief break between lectures, Dr. Jones said he gets much information from interviews with different students at Berkeley. He said he meets with students three times a week, seeing a different student each time.

"They come to me with questions or problems about drugs," he said. "Sometimes I set aside a whole block of time to use for interviewing students."

Giving essentially the same talk to two groups in Brey Hall at the high school, Dr. Jones also cited Aldous Huxley as the intellectual responsible for introducing the hypothesis that taking drugs allows a person to look deeply into his mind.

He said it is a myth that marijuana has the same impact time after time, because eventually the user will need to increase the dosage, although that may not happen for many months.

"With any of these drugs that can cause a turn-on of the brain's gratification mechanisms," he explained, "the brain disconnects itself from the natural steps of reward ... connected to the body parts ...

"Each of you here today is enjoying being alive ... but a person who has used this kind of drug abuse, no matter what they do, will feel pain ...

In answer to a question from a girl, who said she had talked with a former heroin addict who said he felt "reborn" to life since giving up drugs, Dr. Jones said that the only exception to the rule is found in people who have had "very profound religious experiences."

He said there are a few well-documented cases in which someone has passed directly from heroin addiction to a normal life because of religion.

In response to another question, he said he definitely is opposed to the legalization of marijuana.

And, since there'll be one winner for every 50 personal loans approved for 3 months, there's no limit on how many people can win.

Of course, you're probably saying to yourself, "How can I apply for a loan now? With money so tight, I'd do better to wait for the economy to pick up." Well, we'd like to point out that, strange as it probably seems, just the opposite is true. Interest rates are now lower than they've been in years. While prices continue to rise. 1926 Peugeot is gate prize for Gwenn Graham Concours

THIS ANTIQUE 1926 open touring Peugeot will be given to the holder of the winning ticket during the Gwenn Graham Concours Saturday, May 29 at Del Monte Lodge. Proceeds from ticket and poster sales benefit the Monterey Peninsula Community Hospital Auxiliary. The holder of the winning ticket need not be present to win. (William C. Brooks photo).

The Gwenn Graham Concours, set for Saturday, May 29 at Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach, is offering a gate prize to be given away the day of the show.

A 1926 open touring Peugeot has been donated to the Community Hospital Auxiliary by Dr. and Mrs. Lot D. Howard, Jr., of Pebble Beach.

This prestigious car show, sponsored by the Community Hospital Auxiliary and Del Monte Properties Co., is now in its 21st year, and enables car buffs and collectors to view more than 100 elegant and classic cars on the lawn in front of the Lodge.

The Peugeot, a unique replica of a bygone era, captured the imagination of the Howards in 1961 while they were residents of Marin County. Ten years, and barely 100 miles later, this amazing little 47 year old foreign motor car is still in good operating condition and is believed to be the only one of its kind.

The car has still been attracting attention, as it serves as a Del Monte Forest runabout for the Howard's two teenage daughters and older twin sons on visits from the San Francisco Bay Area.

The original owner of the Peugeot, according to the donors, apparently had not realized back in 1961 when he decided to sell his prized possession in the states, that European car collectors had placed rarity values on old car makes, and could have created a greater sale for profit potential.

Dr. Howard, a nationally known orthopedic specialist in hand surgery, recently retired from his San Francisco practice. He had also been serving as a consultant at Letterman Army Hospital and the Presidio of San Francisco. He continues in retirement at Pebble Beach, to serve in a similar capacity with the Fort Ord Army Hospital.

Mrs. Howard is a member of the Hooker and Lent families, early San Franciscans.

All proceeds from ticket and poster sales benefit the Auxiliary. Tickets, which are $2.50 each, include a chance to win this antique automobile and include the gate fee into Del Monte Forest. Send check to: Concours Tickets, Box HH, Carmel, Calif. 93921.

Board OK's summer school program

This year's summer school program was approved by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education at last week's meeting.

The program is not final in that there is a possibility that vocational and technical training classes may be authorized at a future board meeting.

As it now stands, the program includes:

– Reading instruction for 48 selected students presently in levels kindergarten through third grade.

– Instrumental music for students levels four through eight.

– Driver training and instrumental music at the high school.

– Bus transportation for students eighth grade through high school who wish to take summer school courses in Monterey or Pacific Grove.

The reading instruction will be limited to 48 students, two groups of 24 each to meet two hours daily for concentrated instruction. Students for the program, which has been designed for children who will profit most from early assistance in development of reading skills, and is intended to prevent or minimize future learning difficulties, will be recommended by their teachers.

The instruction will begin on June 21 and continue through July 30. Parent transportation will be required to and from [illegible] and River Schools, where the classes will be held.

Driver training is recommended to enable students to meet that requirement for the summer to free them for electives during the regular term.

The total cost of the program, which includes counseling and enrollment for students entering the Pacific Grove and Monterey summer school programs in addition to transportation and teacher and teacher aide salaries, will be $5,440, with $625 of it to be picked up by the state.

WIDE RANGE

Superintendent Harris A. Taylor told trustees, who had expressed interest at past meetings in vocational summer school classes, that a "pretty wide range" of such classes are being offered this summer in Monterey and Pacific Grove. In addition, he said, the district was eligible to enroll five percent of next year's senior class in vocational courses at Monterey Peninsula College this summer.

Trustee James I. Miller said he thought Taylor was to find out how much interest there might be in vocational courses if offered in Carmel.

Trustee Steven H. Sassoon said he thought there would be "a lot more interest by Carmel students to take summer school courses if offered here rather than somewhere else."

Taylor asked the board if it would be willing to spend the funds for vocational courses if 200 students would be willing to take it.

"I'd rather do that than spend money on $40,000 buses, which we have on the agenda tonight," Sassoon replied.

Trustee Hilton Bialek indicated that if students really wanted to take vocational courses, the trip to Monterey or Pacific Grove wouldn't be a barrier. "If their decision is based on that it's a little inconvenient to get over there, I don't think they're very motivated."

Taylor will have a questionnaire circulated asking how many students would take the courses if offered at the high school. The results will be presented at the next meeting.

In other board matters, the board approved a contract making the City of Monterey the fiscal agent for the district to disburse state funds to the district's community youth program. Monterey is providing the same service for other Peninsula school districts and Project Aquarius in Monterey. The district expects to receive about $19,000 in aid.

The board accepted the resignation of Kit Stebbins, language arts teacher at Carmel Middle School, effective June 30. Mrs. Stebbins' husband has been transferred out of the area.

The board went into executive session for a non-tenured staff review and to consider teacher wage proposals.

The sports car for the one who knows the difference:
The difference between a gas-gulping engine and the MG's surprisingly economical 1798 c.c. twin-carb engine. Rugged and proven on the track.
The difference between sluggish response on ordinary steering mechanisms and the split-second response of MG's rack-and-pinion steering.
The difference between the stopping or ordinary brakes and the stopping power of MG's dual braking system with front disc brakes.

Symphony announces programs for '71-72 season

Brochures and ticket applications for Monterey County Symphony's 1971-72 season are being mailed this week to current seat-holders at Carmel's Sunset Auditorium. Renewal deadline is May 21, after which available seats will be sold as applications are received.

Brochures and applications for the Monterey and Salinas concert series will also be in the mail this week. Interested persons who do not receive a brochure may call the Symphony Office, 624-4125, and request a brochure and application blank for the Carmel, Monterey or Salinas series.

An exciting season has been planned by Haymo Taeuber, conductor and music director of the orchestra.

Since pianists are always among the most popular soloists, two concert pianists will be featured. Gita Karasik, winner of Young Concert Artists Auditions and oth[illegible]s, will open the season.

A second pianist, Anthony di Bonaventura, whose performance with the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association this season brought critical acclaim, will be heard with the orchestra in March.

The Symphony's own Ray Fabrizio, flutist, Phyllis Schlomovitz, harpist and Dwight Carver, french horn player, are soloists for the "First Deskplayers Night" in November.

Andor Toth, Sr. and Andor Toth, Jr., violinist and cellist, are featured in the January concert.

An orchestral program which includes the Mahler 4th Symphony in G major with Norma Jean Hodges as soloist is scheduled for February, and the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society closes the season with Stravinsky's "Symphonie de Psaumes" and Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana."

Concert goers have recognized the increasing excellence of Monterey County Symphony Orchestra under Maestro Taeuber's direction, and the popularity of the concert series has grown throughout the present season. To be assured of a ticket for a full season of pleasure, listeners are urged to send their renewals or applications in early, specifying their seating preference.

BY IRVING W. GREENBERG, Ph.D.

REFLECTIONS ON THE MUSICAL SCENE:
I. THE CARMEL MUSIC SOCIETY

The Carmel Music Society brought to Carmel for its 44th season a selection of nationally and internationally known artists and ensembles.

The first artist of the season, the famous Spanish pianist, Alicia De Larrocha, set the mark for the generally high quality of the performances. Her interpretations of Spanish and Latin American music were of such peerless integrity as to make them a model for such performances. The program included works by Schumann and Ravel, also played with high clarity and distinction.

The second artist was Mary Costa, noted Metropolitan Opera star and guest artist last year with the San Francisco Opera in Verdi's "Falstaff." Her Carmel program was a combination of operatic and lieder works which emphasized her affinity for the operatic repertoire and, to a lesser degree, her involvement with the lieder. While the program as a whole was well received, there was some divergence of opinion as to the feasibility of the "television-type" presentation of several of her works.

The third performance in the series was by the Martha Graham Dance Group, famous for many years on both the national and international level for their interpretations. Although there were some questions as to the advisability of presenting a dance group in a musical series, it should be borne in mind that the performance was a terpsichorean interpretation of varied musical pieces. It turned out to be a very viable and interesting concert.

The fourth artist [illegible] virtuso, Itzhak Perlman, Israeli by birth and currently residing in New York City. His interpretations, as well as his immense erudition and affinity for the works performed, showed a sensitivity and beauty of tone elicited from this instrument only by the greatest virtuosi.

The most recent presentation, the Hamburg Chamber Orchestra, played with the marked accentuation and polish expected of European ensembles. The performance, however, did not measure up in every respect to the concerts given by other ensembles that have been heard here previously, notably the Solisti Di Zagreb, who also appeared under the aegis of the society.

As for the mechanics of the series—arranging for artists, publicity and sales—which are features necessary for successful and well-run performances, the society's various committees performed magnificently.

The slate of artists offered by the society for the coming 1971-72 season suggest a year as exciting and interesting as the one just passing.

In order of appearance: Garick Ohlsson, pianist, recent winner of the Warsaw Chopin Award; Joan McCracken, mezzo-soprano, and her husband, James Warfield, tenor- in solo and duet recital; Julian Bream, concert classical guitarist and lutenist; the Western Opera Theatre, a performing group of the San Francisco Opera, in a concert performance of Rossini's "La Cenerentola"; and the Solisti Di Zagreb, the Jugoslavian ensemble, conducted by its founder, Antonio Janigro.

Janigro has not been active with the Solisti Di Zagreb of late, but has promised to direct the ensemble on this tour.

xxx

Last week, the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra led by Finnish guest conductor Okko Kamu, with guest pianist Yuji Takahashi, gave a concert that lacked the fire and genius of Ozawa.

In the Bach Clavier Concerto No. 1 in D minor, the approach by both soloist and conductor was very much undervalued, especially in the adagio movement. The tempi throughout were too slow and the whole did not hang together to create an integrated performance.

The Symphony No. 2 in D is one of Sibelius' most poignant works of national pride, where the four movements each express some aspect of Finnish aspiration. Although Mr. Kamu brought to this work the kind of solid interpretation first enunciated by Koussevitzky, he failed to produce an impression comparable to the days of the piece's first performances. This is not due to the nature of this romantic work, but to the imperious need of the contemporary scene for another idiom. Nevertheless, Mr. Kamu shows promise.

Hidden Valley to benefit from Saturday concert

An outstanding string orchestra comprising Hidden Valley alumnae from throughout the state will perform a special concert at All Saints Episcopal Church Saturday. The concert, to be presented at 8:15 p.m., will be followed by a reception and an opportunity to meet and speak with the students and conductor, Dr. Michael Zearott.

This concert is being offered by the alumnae as a special benefit for the 1971 Seminars which will begin June 27.

Dr. Zearott, the orchestra conductor, received his M.AM. from UCLA and was the recipient of UCLA's first Ph.D. in composition. For several seasons he conducted as assistant to Maurice Abravanel at the Music Academy of the West. His conducting studies include work with Dr. Richard Lert, Roger Wagner, Robert Shaw, Jean Fournet in Paris, Hans Swarowsky in Vienna and Franco Ferrara in Rome.

He attended the International Course for Conductors of the Netherlands Radio Union, the Academie International d'Ete and the Santa Cecilia Conservatory. Zearott was the 1969 First Place Winner of the Dimitri Mitropoulos International Conducting Competition and thereafter left his post as Assistant Conductor of the Atlanta Symphony to accept a position as associate conductor of the National Orchestra of Monte Carlo.

The concert will include works by Giordani, Elgar and Britten.

For each of the two five-week sessions during the summer, Hidden Valley, a non-profit, educational institution, is able to accept 75 outstanding high school or junior college aged students. Session I, 1971, will comprise 40 vocalists and 35 instrumentalists; Session II will comprise 16 vocalists and 60 instrumentalists.

Using the facilities of the York School on the Monterey-Salinas Highway, the seminars offer the student a unique academic and performance opportunity under the guidance of a distinguished faculty.

The small number of students accepted for each session allows the faculty and staff to provide the individual attention necessary to develop accomplished musicians.

As is true with all concerts performed by the Seminars, there will be no admission.

East coast slide program at Carmel Foundation May 12

Marguerite Gregory, an Associate of the Photographic Society of America, Inc., will present her slide program, Along the East Coast, to members of the Carmel Foundation, their friends and the public, Wednesday, May 12, at 2:30 p.m. in Parish Hall of All Saints Epsicopal Church.

In 1950 Mrs. Gregory joined the Photographic Society, whose members number about 12,000 around the world. Most of them are non-professionals, varying from beginner to advanced photographers whose creative endeavors have resulted in photography now being accepted as one of the fine arts. Of the eight divisions of photography, Mrs. Gregory works almost entirely in the Nature Division, although she also belongs to the Color Pictorial and Travel Divisions.

Her pictures have received numerous ribbon awards in international exhibitions and she is ranked by the Nature Division as a 5-star exhibitor. Because of her record as a lecturer, teacher, exhibitor and helping friend to beginners, PSA elected her to an Associateship in 1961.

Both Mrs. Gregory and her husband, J.V C. Gregory are of mid-West pioneer families. Mrs. Gregory was born in Indian Territory, now Oklahoma, was educated in the East and came West from Dayton, Ohio at the time of Mr. Gregory's retirement as an aeronautical engineer. Since then they have travelled extensively in the United States and Canada following their mutual hobby of nature photography.

Along the East Coast is the result of an 11-month photographic journey via travel trailer during which time wildlife refuges, national parks and seashores were visited. Several sequences cover historical areas. Mr. Gregory assists his wife in her photographic projects as well as in the presentation of the programs.

The Gregorys have made their home at Carmel Valley Manor since 1967, though their photographic work finds them travelling a portion of each year.

You're invited to patio picnic parties

BY FRANK H. RILEY, MANAGER SUNSET CENTER

WATCHING "Carousel" the other night, I got to thinking about clambakes and that led me to picnics and what fun they used to be—the fellowship, the fun and the songs. And that made me wonder why we seem to forego such pleasures nowadays.

Well, I suppose it's because we move to new places where we have friends but not quite the same as "old friends," and it's probably got something to do with "modern sophistication;" and then, too, we all have managed to convince ourselves that we are "too busy."

Now, really, I have a hunch that if we would sort of forget all this rationalization and some day just pack up a little lunch and toddle off to some not-too-hard-to-get-to place where we could join with some like-minded souls—maybe bring along a box of checkers—we could, like the folks in Carousel, "all have a real good time."

To test out the theory, we are reserving the next three Wednesdays in May (12-19-26) as Patio Picnic Party Days. We invite you to bring your lunch and bring a friend to the Patio at Sunset at noon, enjoy the fellowship of a shared meal in the open air (we can go inside if it gets cold) and then if you don't have to get back to work, stay for checkers or dominoes or just plain old visitin'.

Oh, yes, we'll [illegible] to coffee.

Won't you give it a try? Let's see how it works out.

TONIGHT AND TOMORROW (Thursday and Friday) brings the last "Explorama" film of the season to Sunset Theatre. This one goes to Australia with Don Richter. A new season of great travel-adventure films begins in the fall, and you can get your season tickets now.

SOMETHING A LITTLE DIFFERENT will be offered on Saturday and Sunday—the Saturday show is at 8 p.m. and the Sunday show starts at 1 p.m. and runs a continuous schedule through the evening. It is a combination film and stage show presented under the official sanction of the Philippine Consulate and featuring a cast of native Philippino performers. Singing and dancing on stage and a movie filmed on actual location in many glamour spots around the world.

NOW, I WOULD LIKE to extend my personal invitation to each of you to attend the free public forum on the subject of "Astrology" to be held at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 13, at Sunset Theatre. We will present a panel of three people each of whom is personally knowledgeable in the field of Astrology but each with an entirely different background.

One, Dr. Mirkovic, has long been associated with the biological sciences as well as with the fields of literature, language, and psychology. Her interest grows from research relating astrology and the behavioral sciences including talent development and career guidance.

Another, Rev. D. Kendrick Johnson, describes himself as a psychic, numerologist, Esoteric Christian minister, a msytic, and an astrologer.

The third, Charles Buskirk, who classes himself as an "advanced amateur," relates to Astrology as a therapeutic force.

With each making a brief presentation from his personal experience in the field, followed by a period for questions and discussion between the audience and the panelists, the forum should offer an opportunity to explore and learn about many aspects of the ancient art (or is it science? myth?). Please come as a guest of Sunset—it will surely prove interesting.

City council resolution asks developer, backers to withdraw Odello land plans

The Carmel City Council was expected last night to adopt a strongly worded resolution asking City Reconstruction Co. and their financial backers to withdraw their proposal for the development of the 292-acre Odello artichoke ranch.

The proposed resolution cited seven reasons why the development, which calls for construction of 1,844 residential and resort units on the property was not in the best interest of the people in the area.

The original wording of the resolution states that "there is almost a unanimous feeling on the part of the citizens—excluding large land owners—against the proposed CRC, Prudential Insurance Co., Kidder Peabody, Del Monte Properties request to modify the zoning requirements of this beautiful area to permit a $60 million-5,000 person project."

The complete text of the resolution submitted for the councilmen's approval follows:

A RESOLUTION INFORMING THE PRUDENTIAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, DEL MONTE PROPERTIES COMPANY AND KIDDER PEABODY COMPANY OF THE CARMEL AREA OPPOSITION TO THE PROPOSED DEVELOPMENT OF THE ODELLO PROPERTY

WHEREAS, in the belief that great companies such as Prudential Insurance Company and the Kidder Peabody Company respect and pay attention to the citizens views concerning their financial actions affecting their well being, and;

WHEREAS, the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea acting for its concerned citizens, as well as those in the adjoining Carmel River area in its accepted zone of influence does transmit the feelings of these citizens to the Prudential Insurance Company, the Kidder Peabody Company and the Del Monte Properties Company.

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES RESOLVE:

That there is almost a unanimous feeling on the part of the citizens (excluding large land-owners) of the Carmel Valley Area against the proposed CRC, Prudential Insurance Company, Kidder Peabody, Del Monte Properties request to modify the zoning requirements of this beautiful area to permit a $60,000,000-5000 person project, and;

That the reasons for the opposition to this project are:

a. The character of the CRC plan is not in keeping with the character of the site and surrounding residential area.

b. Present zoning and previous proposals of the Odello's do not permit the high density planned by CRC.

c. The area of development lies in the flood plain of the Carmel River; it has been inundated and the floods of three times the size of former floods can be expected according to the Army Corps of Engineers 1967 report.

d. Additional diking may help the property but will contribute to greater flooding of adjacent and up-river properties.

e. The huge "resort" complex on the westerly ocean side violates the residential character of the area and may ruin the adjacent game preserve.

f. The high density of residents and transients proposed will add greatly to the problems posed by too many automobiles on a scenic approved two-lane State Highway with inadequate egress and ingress.

g. The Carmel River area is currently experiencing serious fresh water deficiency and pollution problems which may be accentuated by a high density development as proposed.

That the Prudential Insurance Company, the Kidder Peabody Company, and the Del Monte Properties Company are requested to withdraw their proposal for the development of these properties so that the concerned citizens of this area may purchase the Odello properties for the benefit of all the people of the area.

Petpourri

By JUDITH A. EISNER

Dog and horse breeders spend many a sleepless night thinking up appropriate and original names for their animals. Sometimes the name is instantly memorable, as in Man O' War; sometimes the name is whimsical or humorous. The only filly to ever win the Kentucky Derby was named Regret; we wonder what her breeder was sorry about.

Naming a dog or cat who is going to be living with you for a long time requires careful thought and perhaps a family pow wow. If you leave the naming of a new pet up to the kids, you're likely to end up with a Spot, Brownie or Lassie.

If you like names like Spot and Brownie, those names are fine. But more often than not, people would like a more unique and interesting name for their pet.

In general, any name for an animal should be of one or two syllables and distinct-sounding. "Cinderella" is kind of awkward to pronounce even though little girls adore naming puppies after that fairy princess.

Good sources for pet names are similar to sources for baby names. Some of the name books and pamphlets in the library may prove inspiring even though they are intended for human babies.

The Gaines Dog Research Center, 250 Park Ave., New York 10017, sends out a booklet on dog-naming without charge.

Mythology offers a practically endless storehouse of unique names, ranging from the familiar Zeus and Odin to thousands of less familiar but beautiful and appropriate names. "Alastor," for example, means "avenger"; "Brimo" means "raging one;" "Charis" means "grace;" and there are charming stories in the Greek Myths that tell about these ancient personalities.

The kind of dog or cat may help determine its name. Breeders of the sled dogs like to use Eskimo names such as Nonook (bear); Irish Setters do well with Irish names. A local Irish Setter is named O'Rourke, for example.

Siamese cats usually bear Oriental-sounding names. We know one called Mani-Tai, whose mother's name is Loki and whose daughter is called Tani-Tai. Another uniquely named Siamese cat is Sonn II, where the Roman numeral designating that the cat is the second to bear the name helps it sound Oriental, as in "Sun-Tu". We also know of a Siamese named Wyrd, who was the Nordic goddess of Fate.

Stage stars or political personalities may inspire you. A Carmel Valley dog is called Peter O'Toole and he shares his home with a cat named Zapata. We also know a Poodle named Garbo and a Fox Terrier named Senor Pico.

Dogs can be named after Indian tribes, as in Cherokee, Commanche, Apache, etc., or racing cars, as in Ferrari or Lotus.

Perhaps the most innovative name we've come across is Shazam. Those of you who read comics years ago will recall that Captain Marvel cried "Shazam!" whenever launching himself into some new derring-do. As explained to us, Shazam is an acronym for the wisdom of Solomon, the strength of Hercules, the stamina of Atlas, the power of Zeus, the heel of Achilles and the speed of Mercury.

Her daughter is carrying on with an original name -- Sesame.

There are instances where you will select a beautiful name and attempt to teach it to the dog or cat with absolutely no success. Cats, especially, seem to reject names that don't appeal to them.

After a week or two of trying valiantly to accustom the new pet to his name, if you get no response whatsoever, the best we can suggest is that you try a new name. Usually, it works wonders and the puppy or kitten responds almost immediately.

If you buy a dog or cat who is eligible for registration, his name becomes somewhat more important than just what he is known as.

No two animals of one breed may be registered with the same name. That accounts, in part, for purebred dogs and cats having such high-sounding and complicated names. Naturally, the animal is never actually called "High Acres Thane of Cawdor" at home; he is given a call name that is simple and short, like "Thane" in this case.

Purebred dogs and cats are often named by using their kennel name and another name. "High Acres" would be the kennel in the above example and "Thane of Cawdor" the dog's individual name. This method of naming not only identifies the breeder's kennel name, but makes it well nigh impossible to duplicate a name.

If you have a puppy and want to register it with the American Kennel Club (providing of course, that it is purebred and its parents were both registered), and the breeder had no kennel name, you can invent a prefix by using either your own name or a word that refers to your home.

You can use a street name as a prefix, as in Junipero or Casanova or Monte Verde in Carmel and Boronda or Poppy or Sage in Carmel Valley and couple it with the dog's name. That would give you something like Junipero's Jupiter, for example, or Sage's Serena.

The possibilities are endless for giving your pet a unique and attractive name. So why settle for Spot?

xxx

We've noticed a number of dogs in recent weeks riding in the back of station wagons with the rear window rolled down. It has been proven that dangerously dense exhaust fumes will come in that back window and dogs are particularly susceptible to this carbon monoxide. So keep the rear window rolled up and lower windows that will provide fresh air without exhaust fumes for you pet. And that goes for children riding in the back of wagons, too.

Bay Day Circus Saturday

The 11th annual Bay Day Circus will take place Saturday from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. at Bay School's "little red schoolhouse" two miles south of Carmel on Highway 1.

The circus is being held to raise funds for building restoration and will feature pony rides, Indian trail games, nickle games with prizes and a rummage and bake sale.

Lou Berton, the balloon sculptor, will be on hand to shape his unique creations.

An al fresco lunch is planned.

At about noon, Bay School mothers past and present will present a cookbook they compiled to Rosa Doner, who is celebrating her 20th year as school director.

The books will be sold at the circus at a cost of $1.50.

Restaurants that are giving free dinners for two to winners are McDonald's, Souper Soups, Abalonetti's, the Outrigger, Rappa's, the Clock, the Hatchcover, La Playa Hotel, Jack in the Box, Marquis, Sancho Panza, Rafaello's, Chinese Village, the Holiday Inn on Highway 1, the Red Lion (lunch), Oberg's, Pine Inn, L'Escargot, Kalissa's, Mission Ranch, Scandia, Orange Julius, Gallatin's (champagne) and Hyatt House (two-night stay for two people).

Tickets are on sale at the fair for $1.

Committee women in charge of the event are Mrs. Edward Bernstein, Mrs. Robert Wirtz and Mrs. Marshall Chatwin.

DREAM STUFF

"Anybody who wants very much to do a certain thing—and is able to do it—and doesn't do it—is on the wrong track," philosophized E.W. "Bud" Fuhrman.

That was on the eve of his and Annette's departure late last week for Mexico, to spend at least the next six months. "We may decide to live there permanently," he said. "We're taking the time now to find out if that's what we really want to do."

"We love the people and have lots of friends there," he continued. "And I got my golf clubs out of the garage, where they've been rusting for 15 years, and I'm going to find out how my swing is."

They left their shop in the hands of their long-time and competent assistant.

Art sale to benefit OLAF

The new Tyson-Hoppin Gallery, formerly Aardvark at 20 Bernadelli Square, Carmel Valley Village, is giving a benefit sale of Carolyn Tyson's water color paintings, drawings and silk screen prints Saturday, May 15, at 5 p.m. All proceeds will swell the funds being raised to save the open spaces of the Carmel River estuary by OLAF.

Carolyn Tyson is a poet painter and has published a book of her poetry. She has exhibited in her Gainsborough Studio in New York City; Bath, England; Guild Hall, East Hampton; Beverly Hills and Southampton, Long Island, her birth place.

Brought up at Montauk, Long Island, she lived for 12 years in Carmel, and was a neighbor of Robinson Jeffers who greatly encouraged her work. Mrs. Tyson studied at the Cunningham Institute, the Kearsage Group, and the Institute of Modern Art in New York under Victor D'Amico.

Her work is to be found in The America Wing of the Jaffa Museum, Israel, and in several private collections both in the United States and Europe. She has had one-man shows at the Fischbacher Gallery in Paris, and the Upper Grosvenor Galleries in London.

Parents serenaded by recorders

MRS. ANNA Kohner's third grade class tootle briskly through their share of the program. Those identified are (left to right) Laura Tanous, Cheryl Sailer, Carolyn White, Katrina Bokor, Allison Douglas and Keith Bayless.

Highlighting the recent Public Schools Week activities at River School was a recorder concert performed for parents by children in grades two through five. Individual class performances culminated in a group serenade.

The concert was a display of techniques learned by the youngsters since recorder classes began in January.

Prior to the concert, the school's Parent-Teacher Club elected the following 1971-72 school year officers: Mrs. Dana (Polly) Gray, president; Mrs. Gordon (Marian) Clemens, vice president; Mrs. Fred (Sally) Terman, secretary; Mrs. Charles (Carol) Keller, treasurer; Mrs. Eugene (Lou Ann) Harney, room mother representative.

More than 350 parents attended the meeting. Following the business meeting and recorder music, they adjourned to visit individual classrooms.

Refreshments were provided in the cafeteria by fourth grade parents to conclude the evening.

The recorder program at the school is a part of the Carmel Unified School District program designed to reinforce and upgrade music curriculum.

The program is designed to offer motivation leading to instrumental music instruction, to develop individual music knowledge and to stimulate music appreciation.

OLAF meeting Tuesday at Carmel High School

The Odello Land Acquisition Fund (OLAF) will hold an open meeting Tuesday, May 11, at Brey Hall, Carmel High School, starting at 8 p.m.

Purpose of the meeting, according to Fred Farr, head of the group, is to launch action groups in a community-wide effort to purchase the Odello artichoke fields.

Numerous committees have been formed, and chairmen of the various committees will explain what they hope to accomplish, and seek volunteers.

Among the committees are a women's committee, a teacher's committee, a youth committee, a finance committee, a servicemen's committee and a public relations committee.

At a luncheon meeting at the La Playa Tuesday, Farr told supporters that the picnic last Friday netted about $300, and that several hundreds of dollars in contributions were made. He also announced that Rev. David Hill of All Saints Episcopal Church in Carmel was organizing an ecumenical picnic on Sunday, July 4th, to be held at River Beach State Park, in support of the OLAF drive.

Another letter was sent to City Reconstruction Company officials, requesting that they inform the group of their asking price for the 292-acre Odello property. The Los Angeles-based company has submitted plans for the development of the artichoke ranch, and holds an option on the land.

Christian Science

Permanent peace can be achieved, according to the Bible lesson-sermon to be read Sunday at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Carmel.

"God fashions all things, after His own likeness. Life is reflected in existence, Truth in truthfulness, God in goodness, which impart their own peace and permanence." This citation from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy is from the lesson-sermon on "Adam and Fallen Man."

These words of the Apostle Paul will also be read: "Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another."

The next program in "The Truth That Heals" radio series has the title "Why Not Change Your Image – And [illegible] this program on Sunday at 6:30 a.m. and KDON at 8:45 a.m.

Christian Science teacher to discuss heavenly choice

How the individual can free himself most effectively from pollution of the mental atmosphere will be brought out in a public lecture in Carmel on Thursday, May 20.

Grace Bemis Curtis, C.S.B., of Pittsburgh, will discuss ways of cultivating a fuller measure of impartial love, selflessness, mental flexibility and moral courage in helping to establish living conditions free of mental as well as physical pollution.

A Christian Science teacher and lecturer, Miss Curtis will speak under the auspices of First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Sunset Auditorium at 8 p.m.

"When we finally decide that we don't want to live in the hell of mental pollution and begin to choose heaven, we become progressively blessed with inner contentment and outer harmony," Miss Curtis believes.

Long active in the healing ministry of Christian Science, Miss Curtis will relate in her lecture instances of spiritual healing of present-day problems.

Before devoting her full time to the practice of Christian Science, she was a concert pianist. Miss Curtis studied music privately with two students of Franz Liszt. She also studied at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York, and at the New York School for Music and Fine Arts in New York City. In addition to teaching music at Elmira College in New York she has served as president of the Corning Philharmonic Society.

Miss Curtis is a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship.

Her lecture entitled "Let's Choose Heaven Here" is free, and local members have invited the public to attend.

Missionaries at Baptist Church

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cain, missionaries from Mozambique, Portuguese East Africa, will be at the First Baptist Church of Carmel Sunday.

Mr. Cain will speak at the 11 a.m. service and the couple will show slides at the 6 p.m. service.

The Cains are engaged in a literature ministry in Mozambique, having opened the first Christian bookstore in that country in 1968, in cooperation with the Christian Literature Crusade.

Few missionaries operate in the country because of visa restrictions, according to the Cains.

Mr. Cain is from South Africa, having trained in Worldwide Evangelization Crusade College in Glasgow, Scotland. This is his first visit to the United States.

Mrs. Cain is a U.S. citizen. She attended Biblical Seminary in New York and served 18 months in Portuguese Guinea before marrying Edward Cain and moving to Mozambique.

the mayor's report

By BARNEY LAIOLO

I AM INDEED pleased to inform the residents of Carmel that the final steps for the acquisition of the Flanders Canyon property is about completed. It will only be a matter of a short time when the deed to this beautiful property will be transferred to the city. The article appearing in this issue will cover most of the statistics, so I will not elaborate. I do wish however to inform the public that it has been my distinct pleasure working with Mr. Doolittle in formalizing this project. His deep concern for the preservation of open country and for keeping our beautiful area in its natural state has been a revelation to me. In the years to come I am sure all will be grateful to be able to enjoy the area. This is one place where I feel our greenbelt money is being put for the best possible use.

I ATTENDED the performance of "Carousel" at Sunset Center on Thursday night. It was a happy night for me, especially when so many were there for this fine presentation. The cast did an excellent job—the sets were well done and the music by the high school orchestra was professionally performed. I thank all who attended opening night and also all who practically filled the following performance.

I RECEIVED a disappointing call from San Francisco regarding the apparent decision of not building a new Post Office. Since this has been in limbo for about two years, I felt it my duty to write to the Postmaster General for some statistics and a more definite explanation. I have not given up on this issue as I'm certain they do not realize their choice of available and suitable locations are few and far between. If you think the situation at the Post Office is bad now—what can we expect in years to come? I'll advise you regarding any changes on this matter.

THIS LETTER is being written in the first day of a new life. By this I mean that today Mr. Peter Tracey has taken over my business known to you as Village Radio Electric. Pete has been with me many years and I am certain he will continue to offer a fair and square deal and good service to go with it, I wish he and his wife Joyce and all the crew the best of luck. (I'll be staying on for a while to help get over a few of the rough spots.)

At this time I wish to thank all my loyal friends and customers who have been so thoughtful and have helped me through all these years. It has been my pleasure working with all of you.

Thank you—all.

DOUBLE DEAL

Twice, all at once, Mrs. Patricia Trevvett became a grandmother. April 10 when her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Maurizio Bellomo added twin daughters to their household. The new mother is the former Kreigh Trevvett of Carmel.

The little girls have been named Stacy Rina and Morgan Elena. Their great-grandmother is Mrs. Richard Johnson, who, with her daughter, Mrs. Trevvett, lives at Hacienda Carmel. "That second little girl was a big surprise to everyone," revealed Mrs. Johnson.

BUSY, BUSY STORK

Four baby boys, born within four days of each other, created a veritable population explosion for Carmel in late April.

The son born to Mr. and Mrs. M. Michael Meheen was "just what we ordered," said the new mother. Their first child, born April 23, has been named Sterling Javad. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Javad Meheen of Carmel. Great aunt and uncle are Mr. and Mrs. Abdul Sotoodeh of Carmel Valley.

April 24 was the birthdate of Jesse Luke, born to Mr. and Mrs. John Anzini.

Gilbert Winant arrived April 26 for Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Peirsol.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cardinale are parents of the fourth of the quartet, Salvatore Vincent, born April 27.

OOPS!

Carmel phone callers' habit of abbreviating their telephone number to the final four digits, on the provincial premise that everyone knows the first three digits are 624, infected a Pine Cone story on the YWCA last week. The Y's post office box number is not 3506—the final four digits of the organization's telephone number—but P.O. Box 2492.

FOLK MUSIC SOCIETY MEETS

The Folk Music Society holds its regular monthly meeting tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Guitar Shop, Dolores between Fifth and Sixth.

All players of folk music instruments and anyone who simply likes to sing is invited. There are no age or proficiency requirements.

One man show for Joe Feuerborn at Art Association for May

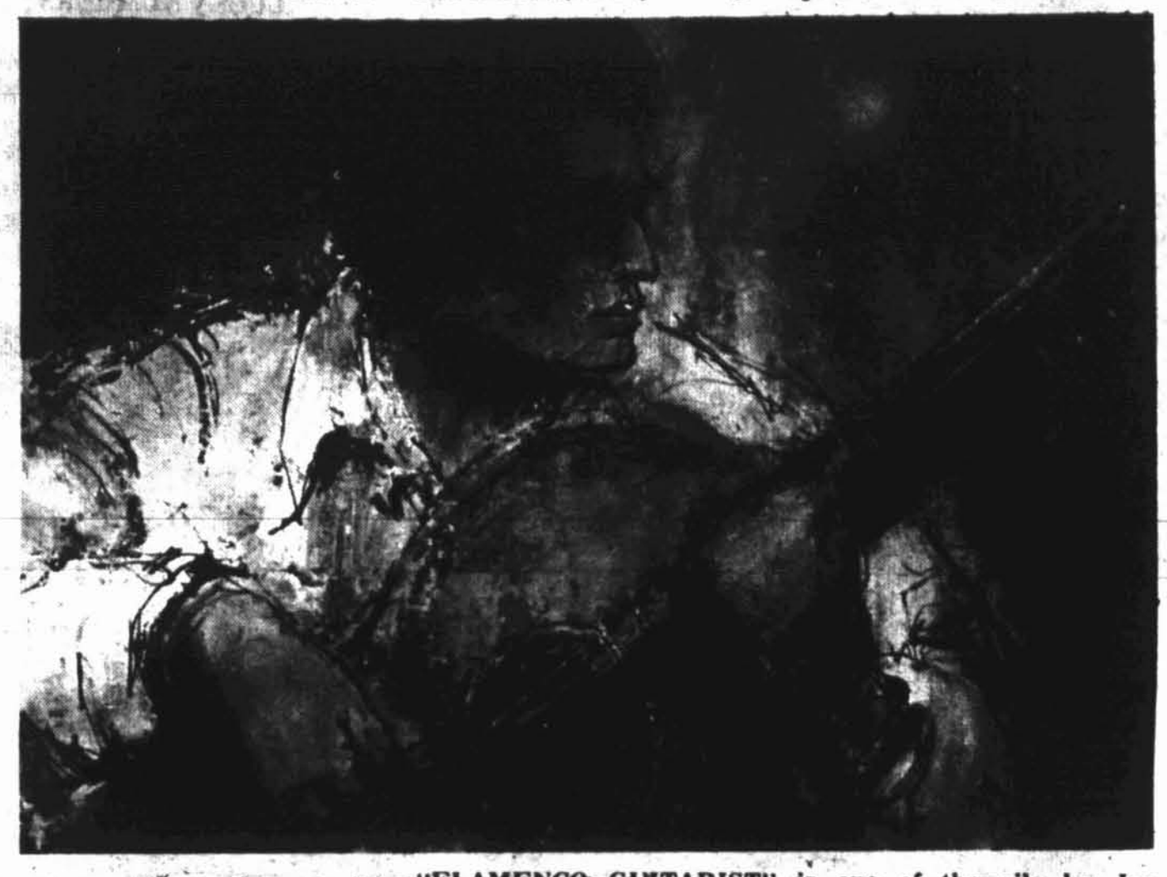
A one-man exhibition of oil paintings by long-time Carmel artist Joe Feuerborn will be the featured exhibition in the Beardsley Room of the Carmel Art Association Galleries, Sixth and Dolores, today through May 30.

Consisting of 20 paintings, Feuerborn's exhibit will present a variety of subjects ranging from portraits of Spanish flamenco guitarists to vignettes revolving about familiar European monuments and such typical Americana as little leaguers. All are rendered in the artist's established technique which begins with an underpainting of acrylic on canvas and is followed by overpainting in oil glazes and a final light varnish.

Feuerborn was born in Chicago and received his early art education at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts. This was followed, in 1948, with active duty in the United States Marine Corps. Upon discharge from the Corps Feuerborn resumed his art studies at the San Diego School of Fine Arts. He also traveled extensively throughout Europe, Asia and the Middle East and lived, for a year, in Mexico. In 1952 he moved to Carmel and finalized his art research at the Carmel Institute of Art. Shortly thereafter he established a studio-residence in Carmel and has been a familiar figure in the area for the past eighteen years.

The tall, rangy Feuerborn may be frequently seen in the Carmel Art Association Galleries fulfilling his position as a member of the organization's board of directors. He has also contributed his services, over the years in one capacity or another, to the art exhibitions of the Monterey County Annual Fair and Exposition. Balancing his pursuit of art with an interest in sports Feuerborn often challenges his family on the tennis courts of the Carmel Valley Racquet Club where they are members.

Feuerborn's exhibition will be open to the public during regular gallery hours, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, including Sundays.



"FLAMENCO GUITARIST" is one of the oils by Joe Feuerborn on display now at the Art Association.

"These are not emotional paintings in the sense of turmoil, yet they evoke deep responses. The obvious becomes the mystery as -- with an acute sense of realism -- he weaves a net for transitory moments and things".
Famous art connaisseurs, among which Norton Simon, recognized the unique qualities of Robert Clark's paintings by including them in their collections.

CARMEL CLOSEUP: John Cunningham

'The biggest sin is a dead painting'

BY STEVE HAUK

One wonders. Where is the 800-pound stoneware head of Bach, sculpted by the late Beniamino Bufano, and stolen from its glistening stainless steel body one dark Carmel morning in 1942 just hours before it was to be unveiled in Devendorf Plaza?

The loss is great but the mystery is delicious. Maybe the head is no longer intact, long ago ground underfoot and scattered into a million pieces. Perhaps it is whole. It could be out of the country, sitting atop a huge pedastal in some crooked art collector's mansion. Or hidden in some Carmel attic or cellar, wrapped in moldy blankets, or crosshatched with spider webs and freckled by their victims.

Artist John Cunningham remembers the theft, perhaps simply a grotesque prank, someone's idea of a good joke. It was Cunningham's idea that the statue be dedicated in Carmel.

It was when the war started and Cunningham was back between shifts as a seaman. Bufano was Cunningham's houseguest in his then Carmel Point home.

"Bufano mentioned that he had just made a monumental statue of Bach in stainless steel. It was made under the auspices of the U.S. National Youth Administration."

Cunningham interrupts his story to point out that the boys who worked the stainless steel with Bufano were among the few qualified to immediately enter the country's accelerated war plane building program.

"I thought it would be a good idea to have a world unveiling of this statue of Bach at Carmel during the Bach Festival, so I called Aubrey Williams in Washington, D.C., and got permission to have the statue brought from Los Angeles to here. Bufano went to Los Angeles and brought it back."

Cunningham, with his seaman's experience in rigging, "got three telegraph poles and I made a tripod and got this 18-foot statue up on a wooden base. The head of the statue was made of stoneware and weighed about 800 pounds. It was all covered up, and in the morning (Gastone) Usigli, the conductor of the festival, was to be there with the chorus, and trumpeting, along with local officials to have this public unveiling.

"At 4:10 in the morning, the Carmel police phones me and said the statue had been knocked down and the head had disappeared. I immediately went downstairs and told the utterly surprised Bufano, who was sleeping on the couch, that the head of the statue had been stolen.

"Because this statue belonged to the federal government, the FBI was called in and there was a lot of scurrying around and investigating. To this day no one knows what happened and the head has never been found. The story got around that one of the service organizations did away with it because Bach was German.

"This was the first time the Bach Festival made nationaly publicity and Time magazine."

Cunningham has many stories involving artists. He has known many of them. Bufano, Hans Hofmann, Fernand Leger, to name a few. He tells the stories easily. What is hard is to get Cunningham, for 30 years director, president and an instructor of the Carmel Art Institute, to talk about himself.

"Background on me, after being around here so long, is sort of a redundancy. It has no bearing on the point. And it rather embarrasses me."

The interviewer has to pry, really pry, before he opens up a bit.

Cunningham, a tall, gray-bearded man with turquoise eyes, was born in 1906 in Madison Township in New Jersey. The family, while retaining the house in Madison Township, also had an apartment in New York City where Cunningham and his three brothers and three sisters attended school.

The apartment was on 81st Street. The Metropolitan Museum of Art is on 81st Street.

"I played in the Metropolitan when I was a kid. That's where I got my first interest in art. It was a little place then, don't forget."

When did he decide he wanted to paint? He doesn't like the question. Any answer, to him, would sound pretentious. Ask a few more times and he finally answers, probably out of exasperation.

"Well, actually, I knew at the age of 11 I would be a painter ..." although the schools he went to didn't offer any kind of formal art training.

Cunningham attended Manhattan College in New York City for a semester before coming to California. He continued his education at St. Mary's in Oakland (now located in Morgoa) before transferring to Berkeley where he earned his A.B. and his M.A.

As an actor, he first saw Carmel in 1926 when the University of California Little Theatre gave the American premiere of Noel Coward's "The Young Idea" – It's a lousy play," says Cunningham - in the Theatre of the Golden Bough.

"And I made up my mind then, this is where I'm going to live. But it's fantastic that I should end up in the very same place."

Exactly the same place. The Carmel Art Institute, Ocean Ave. and Monte Verde, is the building that used to house the Theatre of the Golden Bough.

"In those days, that was a really world famous theater."

Cunningham was an honorary traveling fellow with the University of California.

"I traveled in the Orient and I studied with Hans Hofmann in Munich, Germany, long before he was acclaimed in New York as the greatest art teacher of the 20 Century."

He also studied with Andre L'hote at Paris, and then went to work as an assistant to Bufano in Cagnes-sur-Ner, Alps Maritime, France. They became friends and went often for long walks in the Alps' foothills.

From 1931 through '33, Cunningham was summer school director and resident artist of the Cranbrook Academy of Arts in Michigan; in 1935 visiting professor at Mills College Summer School of Art; in 1936 chief designer of exhibition for the U.S. Resettlement Division, Washington, D.C.; staff artist of the governor's commission of the University of California Hall of Science at the Golden Gate International Exposition which was held in San Francisco in 1937.

He had his first one man show in 1932 at San Francisco's M.H. De Young Museum, and has exhibited continually since. He does much of his painting in his home in Robles Del Rio, overlooking the Carmel River, and with his wife Patti and two sons, Ashley, 35, and Blair, nine, looking over his shoulder. Another son, Gael, 25, works in a Palm Springs art gallery.

He also paints along with his students at the art institute.

"After 40 years of teaching, I have worked out a system so that I can teach 90 percent of all people to be good painters.But I can't teach anyone to be an artist. As a matter of fact, I never refer to myself as an artist. I only know I am a good painter."

And a good instructor.

Before Governor Reagan, in an economy move, dropped the art section from the California State Fair and Exposition three or four years ago, Cunningham's students, within a five-year period, won 12 of the 17 awards, including give firsts and four seconds, given in the private school art section. Additionally, a large number of known artists benefitted from his tutorage.

Among the artists Cunningham has brought to the institute to teach, he thinks the most famous were probably Leger and Alexander Archipenko. In the most recent two books published on their lives, their periods at the art institute are mentioned.

Leger's work and Leger in person were part of an exhibition and lecture series Cunningham brought to the Monterey Peninsula in 1940. Held in the old Del Monte Hotel in Monterey, it was the first exhibit of original modern art ever held on the Peninsula, and also included works of Picasso, Braque, Matisse, Modigliani. Cunningham and Leger gave a series of lectures and Leger showed his famous film, "The Ballet Mecanique," made in 1923 at the Theatre of the Golden Bough.

Although it wasn't always the case, Cunningham now paints only in oils. Point Lobos is one of his favorite subjects, seascapes and landscapes, portraits, just people, and now and then an occasional nude.

A restless man full of nervous energy -- during the interview he would shift often in his chair and seemed to view it as something trying to keep him prisoner -- it is easy to understand Cunningham when he explains that, while very artist has his own way of working, to get a visual vitality in his painting it has to be done as quickly as possible.

So his large scenes, such as his 32- by 48-inch Point Lobos scenes, he completes in two hours!

He expects failures and the expression, "It's only a mediocre man who is always at his best," delights him, because he knows all of his paintings can't be good. But when he "really hits it, it's very good."

"My main interest in picture making," he says, "is the manipulation of pictorial space with glowing color and atmosphere to give an observer a living visual impact.

"The biggest sin is a dead painting. And my biggest interest is in getting a quality of visual life into a picture. When it has that, I keep it. Otherwise I destroy it."

Cunningham estimates he has done over 1,000 paintings in the last 10 years. He has about 800 of them on hand. This prolific output he attributes to his practice of finishing a picture in two hours.

Right now Cunningham has something other than painting on his hands. Friday he was appointed to head a Carmel Art Association (of which he has been a member since 1938; president in 1965) committee to raise funds and work in close cooperation with the Odello Land Acquisition Fund (OLAF) to enlarge Carmel River State Beach.

Cunningham was the right choice to lead the committee. In 1948, when the whole Carmel Point beach, from Stewards Point to the Carmel River, was threatened with housing development on the ocean side of Scenic Drive, Cunningham, who was still living at Carmel Point, was appointed by the late Remsen Bird, Cunningham's neighbor and president of the art association, chairman of the Carmel Art Association's Beach Acquisition Fund.

Under Cunningham, the 125 art association members each donated a painting and they were auctioned off, raising $3,400. This money was matched by the state and it was the initial push that resulted in the acquisition of what is now Carmel River State Beach.

Cunningham plans another such action in the present push to extend the state beach onto Odello property.

But while this is the committee's present goal, Cunningham has bigger ideas for the long run.

"I have a feeling we are being too limited in our present land acquisition efforts. And at this ripe time, because of the national interest in the permanent preservation of our seashores, we should go after a Santa Lucia national seashore which would be established by the same type of Authorization Act, Public Law 9545, which created Redwood National Park.

"The possible initial boundaries of the Santa Lucia national seashore, which were selected by my son Ashley, who has tramped over the area for the last 20 years, would run from the mouth of the Carmel River, east to the junction of Potrero Canyon and the Carmel River, then south to the summit of Palo Corona, then west, following Doud Creek to the ocean.

"Private dwellings," he continued, "presently occupied, together with a reasonable acreage around each one, could be excluded from the national seashore, with the provision that no further construction on this acreage be permitted, except on the approval of the secretary of the interior.

"Provision could be made for certain agricultural and ranching activities presently being carried out to continue. In this approach, funds would be available from the federal government which at this moment seems very interested in such projects."

Cunningham realizes such a proposal will get a lot of people steaming, but is undaunted.

Wouldn't it be nice, if a Santa Lucia national seashore ever became reality, if it were crowned by an 800-pound stoneware head of Johann Sebastian Bach?

Wherever it might be.

New shake roof for high school would shake down taxpayers for $87,600

The heavy shake roof at Carmel High School is gradually deteriorating.

Business Manager Walter E. Hinton last week handed the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education trustees some of the crumbling wood shake and said, "It's been there for about 30 years and it's about had it."

Hinton said that the roof has reached the point where sections should be replaced as funds are available.

The question is, and the reason the board did not authorize Hinton to obtain price quotations or to advertise for bids: What to reroof the roof with?

Hinton said that because new regulations would require new wood shakes to be fire resistant, their cost would be $120 per square. Because the high school has 730 squares of roof area, the total cost would be $87,600. On the other hand, he said, a high quality self-tabbing roof would cost $35 per square, or $25,550, a difference of $62,050.

"Certainly," he said "nobody could argue the point that the shake roof is much more attractive."

Hinton handed the trustees pictures of the self-tabbing roof.

The board agreed with his statement; it didn't like the looks of the stuff.

UNATTRACTIVE

Trustee Steven H. Sassoon said about the composition roofing, "I think if you go ahead with this you're going to change the character of the high school campus and I'd hate to see it."

"I can't see the whole high school covered with that stuff," said Richard T. Wilsdon, board president.

"There has got to be a better choice than this stuff," said Trustee James I. Miller.

But the trustees also didn't like the cost of the wood shakes.

"Well," said Hinton, "we're not happy with this choice either and that's why we brought it to the school board. We think we might have a problem."

Miller recommended the administration make a study to see what other roofing materials might be available.

Sassoon agreed. "If there is a third choice, we really ought to look at it if it doesn't cost any more."

The immediate problem is 115 squares on the gymnasium; rain water is leaking into locker rooms. To cover this would be $16,000 for shakes, $5,000 for composition.

Meanwhile, the administration will look for a third choice.

Symphony, choral society offer 'Elijah' May 16, 17

The Monterey Peninsula Choral Society will join the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra in the final concert of the 1970-71 season. Maestro Haymo Taeuber, conductor and music director of both groups, will lead the combined chorus and orchestra in the dramatic oratorio, "Elijah" by Felix Mendelssohn, Sunday evening, May 16 at Monterey Peninsula College's gym-auditorium, and Monday evening, May 17, in Sunset Auditorium, Carmel.

Soloists for the Old Testament musical drama are Norma Jean Hodges, soprano, Glenna DeWeese, contralto, Paul Raabe, tenor and James Tippey, bass. Valerie Scott sings the role of the Youth, and members of the Choral Society, Jane Strauch, Jo-Ann Hatch, Nancy Stone, Edith von Stillfried, Kathy Wilson, Dorothy Buffo, Betty Jane Johnson, Mary Crawford and Claudine Van Vleet, are the Angel voices.

The 100-voice Choral Society appeared most recently in a presentation of Handel's "Messiah" at the Naval Postgraduate School on Palm Sunday. In March the Chorus sang the "Theresa Mass" by Haydn in San Francisco's Grace Cathedral. As part of the Bicentennial celebrations, the Choral Society and the Symphony performed the Beethoven "Missa Solemnis" to an audience of 2,700 people in the courtyard of Carmel Mission Basilica. Under the direction of Maestro Haymo Taeuber, the chorus has become one of the major choral groups in California.

Tickets for the Monterey concert are available at Abinante's, Monterey; Grove Pharmacy, Pacific Grove; Community Services, MPC, Monterey; Recreation Office, USNPGS, Monterey; Service Club No. 1, Fort Ord; Service Club, Presidio; Symphony office, Sunset Center, Carmel - 624-4125, and at the Box office, night of performance.

The Carmel concert is virtually sold out to season ticket holders. Those who find they cannot attend the Carmel concert are urged to call the Symphony office to release their season tickets for sale. Release of tickets is considered a donation to the Symphony and also affords pleasure to those on the waiting list for seats. Call 624-4125 for release of tickets or for reservations.

Remember When?

10 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, May 4, 1961

John Farr, who has literally been an instrumental part of the Monterey County Symphony since he helped to found the orchestra here twenty years ago, will be one of four soloists to be featured in a performance of Mozart's Vesperae Solennes de Confessore at the symphony's final concert of the season, May 16 at Sunset Auditorium.

A proposed 4 per cent motel-hotel bed tax which could net the City of Carmel a $65,376 annual revenue was outlined by City Clerk Larry Rose last night in a detailed report accepted by the Carmel City Council.

Ralph Thompson, Carmel Pony League president, announced that the first Carmel Pony League tryout will be held this Saturday at the Carmel High School baseball field.

Brett Weston, second son of the late internationally known photographer, Edward Weston of Carmel Highlands, will show his photographs on the Peninsula for the first time since 1948, when he shared a Pat Wall Gallery exhibition with his father and his brother, Cole Weston.

A World of Beauty is the title Alexander G. Weygers has given his lates[illegible] fall and winter subjects.

An uneasy truce between membership of the Church of the Wayfarer, its pastor K. Fillmore Gray, and the Methodist Conference followed a jam-packed meeting at the parish hall Monday night at which it was announced that the Methodists will file legal action in superior court to determine the status of the 57-year-old church.

Commander Paul T. Artellan, vice-commanders Frank Girard and Frank Shannon, and adjutant Fabian Era were re-elected by acclamation at Monday's meeting of the Carmel Legion Post 512.

25 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, May 3, 1946:

The Pine Cone Softball Club held its first workout last night from 6 to 7 on the Sunset playfield under the direction of George Mosolf, manager and coach, and his assistants, Harry Tanous and Fred Warren.

The weekly Cypress Point Club Rain-Check golf tournament resulted in a tie last Saturday, Harry C. Hunt and Harrison Godwin finishing 7 up in the match-play-against-par contest, as did Charles M. Daniels and Walter E. Egan.

Hostesses are needed at the Carmel USO and candidates for appointment should contact the director, Miss Margaret Achterman, or the chairman of the Senior hostesses, Mrs. Blanchard Steeves, for a personal interview.

The first major Carmel hotel transaction in several years occurred here recently, with the sale of La Ribera hotel to Robert G. Wallace. Former owner was George M. Duntley.

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, May 5, 1921:

Attorney Hugh Osburn, representing Carmel's Trustees and City Marshal August Englund, met in legal combat, Attorneys Hudson, Jorgensen and Campbell, representing the opponents of the proposed improvement of Ocean avenue, before Judge Barden, of the Superior Court, in Salinas yesterday morning at 10 o'clock.

Carmel was truely a deserted village yesterday morning during the Ocean avenue action in Salinas. The pilgrimmage leaving town reminded one of the evacuation of Warsaw. A well-known poet while window shopping on Ocean avenue during the egress, when asked why he was not going, he is quoted as follows: "Salinas? What's doing there? Is the Rodeo on?"

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin C. Hogle motored down the Coast to Pfieffer's on Sunday last. They report the road in good condition.

Magic Fishbone moves to new location

Martha Bruggeman is a woman with definite ideas. No sooner had she moved her shop, the Magic Fishbone, into new quarters at L'Espalier Court last week, than the court gained a new name.

"Court of the Fountains" she decided to call the Mission and Seventh shopping cluster, after the metal sprays located in the center of the court.

"I thought the court was more distinguished than this sort of nondescript European title—'L'Espalier'—indicated," she says. "There are so many courts in Carmel with names that don't really match their character."

Apparently the other tenants agreed because the new address became official this week.

Mrs. Bruggeman moved the Magic Fishbone from crowded quarters several blocks south on Mission where she conducted a successful business for 7½ years. The Magic Fishbone—the name comes from the title of one of Dickens' fantasies—is one of the few book shops in the country dealing only in children's books.

"It was quite a new idea at the time," Mrs. Bruggeman says of the shop's origins. "People in the book field didn't think there would be enough buyers. You probably don't know this, but most bookstores need a wide variety of merchandise—'sidelines'—to carry the business."

The Magic Fishbone deals only in books for children, of which more than 3,000 titles are published annually.

"It's hard for a parent to come by advice and help in finding suitable books—ones that suit a particular age and interest level," says Mrs. Bruggeman. "People can choose out of the best sellers, but that's no basis for selectivity. We're here to help parents find books of excellence for their children."

Mrs. Bruggeman says she "constantly studies and evaluates" new publications to keep up with the trade. She also regularly takes correspondence courses and attends classes at the University of California at Berkeley which relate to her field.

Her knowledge is dispensed in talks to local parent groups, classes at local schools, panels and articles for trade journals. She is convinced there is a need to educate the public about children's books.

"Not everyone is willing to see that the whole future of the literary world starts with children," she says.

Mrs. Bruggeman, who moved to Carmel in 1955 with her husband, Howard, a retired cable television executive, was a teacher before entering the book business. The spur for the shop came on an occasion when Mrs. Bruggeman was hunting through Peninsula book stores looking for books for her grandchildren. The selection was discouraging.

"One man told me he really wasn't interested in education, he was only interested in making money," she recalls.

A book store of her own seemed the solution.

"You can't tell people about books, you have to show them," she says.

The Magic Fishbone proved to be a retail success, despite what the experts said. The shop boasts customers from all over the world. In addition, Mrs. Bruggeman selects and mails books to about 50 families around the country.

The growth that eventually led to last week's move was accomplished in a small, cozy shop hidden from the main shopping track.

"Those seven and a half years prove location is not the first requisite of a successful business, it's your product," says Mrs. Bruggeman.

Several visitors to Carmel have recently indicated to Mrs. Bruggeman that they intend to model stores after tye Magic Fishbone in their own areas. A girl from Minnesota was among them as well as several Californians.

"The parents' demand is there, it's a matter of answering," she says.

LINES FROM LOIS

wooden spoons were carved to fit Great-Grandmother's hand and quilts were made to fit the size of the person who would sleep under them. It's a long way from those times of complete individuality to our present day of mass production of just about everything with which we live.

One of the few avenues of individual expression left open to us is also one of the most rewarding — the planning and building of our own homes. If you select the Monterey Peninsula or the fabulous Sur Coast for your building plans, individuality becomes the rule rather than the exception. But how do you find these unusual sites?

OUR POT-BELLIED STOVE has become a well known symbol in this area for old-fashioned personal assistance in locating your own special dream-property, and it is our pleasure as well as our privilege to help you find a site as close as possible to your heart's desire.

GREAT GRANDMOTHER MADE A SAMPLER of interesting stitches from which she could later select the ones she wanted for some unusual embroidery; we at Real Estate by the Sea collect interesting building sites so you will have a good selection from which to choose your own.

We will make up an individual "sampler" for you – a list of possibilities personalized to your own preferences as to climate, view, terrain, size, etc.

CHECK AT THE SIGN OF THE POT BELLIED STOVE. It's such a pleasure to consider this lovely land with you.

Supervisors hammer out new redistricting plan

By a 3 to 2 vote, the County Board of Supervisors gave tacit approval Tuesday to a redistricting plan which would keep most of Carmel Valley within Supervisor Willard Branson's fifth district.

The board directed the Planning Commission staff to prepare a map showing revised boundaries for the five supervisorial districts and present it for what will likely be a final vote on May 25 at 11 a.m.

Branson and board chairman Arthur Atteridge of Salinas voted against the plan, which was presented by Supervisor Warren Church of North County.

Redistricting is required because of the one man-one vote ruling of the Supreme Court, and supervisors are faced with the task of dividing up the population of Monterey County into five areas containing approximately 49,000 persons each.

Church's proposal was a slightly modified version of one he had presented last November, which the board had approved "in principal" by the same 3 to 2 vote, pending the compilation of final census figures.

Atteridge strongly objected to the proposed boundaries because Salinas would be carved up into three districts.

Branson had two basic objections to the plan: that it does not divide up urban and rural-unincorporated areas on an equal basis, which would equalize the workload for each supervisor; and that it does not provide increased representation for Carmel Valley on the board, which Branson feels is essential if Carmel Valley's multitude of problems are to be dealt with more successfully.

The plan tentatively adopted would keep all of Carmel Valley as far east as Camp Steffani within the fifth district. Although a precise dividing line is yet to be drawn, Camp Steffani itself would probably go into the fourth district, as would the Russell Ranch. Hitchcock Canyon would stay in the fifth district.

The dividing line would extend north across the Valley and up to the top of the ridge and then follow along the ridge line.

Branson said he felt the latest proposal was a "little more palatable" than Church's original plan, primarily because it puts most of the Monte Regio-Rio Vista area of Monterey back into the fifth district, instead of giving it to Loren Smith's neighboring fourth district.

But when Church argued that his plan would also help to even out the workload, Branson disagreed.

Branson said that "due to the dissenting voice of the people of Carmel Valley, we seem to have backed off" from any plan that would split the main part of the Valley between two supervisors.

"If you want to go on the basis of workload," he told Church, "I'll go on it any day of the week ...

"There seems to be some contradiction in this whole thing," he continued. "That newspaper in the Valley (The Outlook) doesn't speak for all the people, because I've talked to many people in Carmel Valley who say they want two supervisors because of the heavy workload they generate.

"Maybe it would be more fair to Carmel Valley if we split it technically and did have Mr. Smith in there too."

Smith disagreed, saying that he had found a "strong feeling of community of interest" in the Valley and therefore would not support any plan that divided the Valley.

He said that whereas in the past he had represented an almost totally urban area, primarily Seaside, he was "happy" to pick up some rural area in Corral de Tierra and San Benancio Canyon.

"The only difference is there are not too many people in that area," Branson replied.

After the vote, Branson said he doubted that there would be any significant changes in boundaries before the final vote will be taken.

He repeated his position that Carmel Valley should have more representation, and said he believes the hillside conservation ordinance would have passed if the Valley had been represented by a second supervisor.

"But I'm not complaining all that much," he said smiling. "After all, I'm used to the workload and to the Valley. And I'll go on working my hardest."

Dear Editor:

I needn't emphasize the obvious fact that Carmel is genuinely and naturally unique.

The ecology of a community expresses the thinking of its inhabitants. Physical clean-up campaigns are not enough. Mankind's thinking must be changed.

Pollution, greed, shortsightedness, first originate in our thinking before manifesting itself in our surroundings.

Natural beauty need not be destroyed.

Certainly indifference or self-interest will not be allowed to neglect or destroy a community like Carmel!

Would it be possible or practical to suggest tax relief for the Odellos if there is no other alternative?

Dear Editor:

Mr. Tom Hudson has been working hard to preserve a beautiful piece of land from destruction by pollution. It looks like a down hill fight all the way. He has positive ideas with regard to using the Odello property to decrease this pollution coming from the Del Monte Properties. It is redundant to point out that his scheme would have the double value of keeping the population density down a little longer, as well as preventing further destruction of one of the most beautiful scenic routes in the world.

Surely there is more to value than the dollars of a Los Angeles Corporation with their high rise apartments. There must be some other place for these people to do their exploiting.

In the meantime Mr. Hudson's energy and imagination should be commended and supported. It is unfortunate that he cannot be two places at once. He certainly is needed on the Board of Supervisors.

Yours truly,

Dear Editor:

Our only hope for the future of the Monterey Peninsula is a Board of Supervisors and Planning Commission who will enforce a stringent rezoning to protect one of the most beautiful areas in the world. When we see them allowing Jerry Lewis Theatres and ugly housing developments and gas stations instead of green belts it is time for the property owners to demand representatives who will represent us, not the out of state developer.

Santa Cruz and San Mateo Counties are rezoning to protect and conserve what they have and it can be done here, it must be done!

We must act now. Write to your supervisor and ask to be represented fairly. It is shameful the way the property owners of Carmel Valley are being ignored in favor of the big business by the Supervisors and Planning Commission. Our supervisor Willard Branson took the master plan of Carmel Valley away from us three years ago so we have no protection.

Dear Editor:

After listening to Nixon's recent press conference and his subsequent speeches, using Spiro Agnew's vernacular, I would label him provincial, political and pontifical as well as suffering from delusions of grandeur.

His logic is atrocious. His constant use of the word "I" allows him to make statements which have no basic facts to support them. Take for example his repeated statements that his Viet Nam policy is the only policy which will guarantee permanent peace for our grandchildren. This statement is pure poppycock. Neither he nor anyone else can guarantee that in the future more will give up war as a means of obtaining his desires, and that peaceful solutions of disputes between nations will result if his Viet Nam policies are adhered to.

When he says, I am going to stick to my decisions regardless of the fact that millions of intelligent citizens as well as millions of foreigners all say he is wrong, shows a complete lack of sensitivity and a pontifical approach to the infallibility of his opinions.

His positive statement that we shall stay in Viet Nam and continue fighting until our prisoners of war are released is another example of his illogical thinking. He should study history and he might learn that war prisoners are not released while war is in progress. If he wants to learn about the brutal treatment of war prisoners, let him read the Story of Andersonville where Americans treated other Americans with the utmost cruelty and where thousands died as a result.

Why should he think he has the right to send thousands more of our young boys to be killed or maimed or become hopeless drug addicts, when they are in no way responsible for the refusal of Hanoi to release the prisoners until the war is over. Nevertheless, following his policy, our boys will be drafted and sent to Viet Nam to continue this unholy war and be sacrificed because Nixon says "I" will not be swayed by the millions who oppose my views.

Yours very truly,
